ARE OF DIFFERENT TYPES

Twenty years ago William J. Bryan attended a democratic national convention as a reporter, thrilled the vast assemblage with his oratory and left the hall with the presidential nomination. Since that time he has borne the banner of democracy twice, and is now back at the job he held when he literally leaped into fame. He had perhaps the strongest personal following of any political leader the country has ever produced unless it was Roosevelt; but that following was not strong enough to elect principle also applies to campaign management. him. The difference in the character of the two however is strongly shown in their actions with regard to their nominees. Roosevelt forced the republican party to accept Taft as its nominee, and he was elected. Bryan was responsible for the nomination of Wilson. Roosevelt after selecting Taft, got sore because the latter did not step out of his way and allow him to have a third term, and deliberately not only defeated Taft, but threw down the party that had given him the highest honors at its command; and but recently threatened to repeat his action of four years ago. Defied and beaten he then strangled his own bantling and left it to die for want of parental care.

Bryan on the other hand, finding himself at outs with the policies and course of the man he had made president, resigned from the cabinet, took up again his old vocation as a private citizen, and kept his mouth shut like a gentleman. He is still following this course and probably will until the end.

Roosevelt butcherknifed the party that made him and strangled the party he created later.

Bryan, honored three distinct times by the nomination for the presidency by his party, when he discovered the party held beliefs contrary to his, submitted gracefully, and remained an honorable, clean gentleman. He has had to stand all kinds of ridicule of himself and his ideas; he has been maligned by the republicans, and made a target for their wit. He has been called a dreamer, I and a fool; but no one has likened him to or called him a political highwayman, or a party assassin. No one can say of him as can be said of another personage who says he is out of politics that he betrayed like Judas Iscariot, and this with no symptom of that arch traitor's remorse.

Large Amount of News Print Used by Daily Capital Journal

In order that the Audit Bureau of Circulations, representing the national advertisers of the country, might check up and prove the circulation of the Daily Capital Journal, their auditor, Mr. Hayden, was given authority to procure from the paper jobbers the amount of news print used by the Capital Journal during the six months ending April 1, 1916. This statement from the wholesale house of Blake, McFall Co., shows that we used in that time 118,145 pounds of white news print and 5,417 of colored news print, a total of 123,562 pounds, or slightly less than 64 tons.

This is an interesting fact for the public to know as it gives some idea of the large amount of news print used by a newspaper like the Capital Journal and the expense of this single item of newspaper publication—which is only a small part of the total expense, labor coming first, news print second, telegraph tolls third, and after that numerous small miscellaneous items to complete the grand total. A daily newspaper like the Capital Journal is one of the city's largest industries, paying good salaries and employing many persons.

The letters below are self explanatory:

"Portland, Ore., May 21, 1916.

"Mr. C. H. Fisher, care Capital Journal, Salem, Oregon. "Dear Sir-Attached find copy of a letter which we gave Mr. C. G. Hayden the original of, and trust this was carrying out the instructions that you meant to convey

"'During the interim between October 1, 1915 and April 1, 1916, the total tonnage of news print shipped to the Capital Journal was 118,145 lbs.

"In addition to the above we also shipped them 5,417 lbs. of colored news print. While this matter was not up while you were here yet feeling that it might be a part of the record you desire we make this acknowledgment at the same time.'

"'Trusting we have given you the information you desire, we are,'

"Yours truly, "'Blake, McFall Company'."
