CONGRESS POSTPONED ACTION ON THE BILL

Whatever Is Done To Aid Militia Is For Future Legislation

Washington, June 28.--National guardsmen drafted into Mexican service will neither have their families or dependents financially aided by the government, nor will the men themselves be given the privilege of exemption, under terms of an agreement on the Hay draft resolution reached this afternoon by house and senate conferees.
If the guardsmen or their families do receive any aid, it will be under legislation yet to be introduced and separately considered.
The draft resolution itself simply will declare an emergency exists and draft all guardsmen into federal service so they may be used on the Mexican side of the border, if necessary.
Members of both branches of congress who favor aid to the guardsmen's families say they would push this type of legislation. But there will be difficulty in getting it reported from the two military committees and onto the crowded calendar of the two houses.
Friends of the guardsmen admitted this afternoon's action is a severe blow to their hopes.
The conferees planned to report their action to both houses at once and it was expected the draft resolutions itself would have been approved before adjournment for the day.
The house passed the Hay resolution without a roll-call at 4:30. A separate resolution providing for aid of dependents of militiamen will be introduced in the house Monday.

The Soldier Nimrod

A true story in verse. By Herbert W. Copeland, eyesight specialist.
Thompson was a soldier bold, Full six feet six he stood. He had the strength of Hercules, But his eyesight wasn't good. He loved his dear old Uncle Sam, He loved his country's flag; And who called the anarchist, Who unto the same "rag!"
He also loved to hunt and fish, A modern Nimrod he; But a man should have good eyesight if A Nimrod he would be. One day he wandered in the wood, A deer! Up came the gun, Then when the smoke had cleared away, He saw what he had done.
There lay a farmer's Jersey cow, A scene he never forgot! The owner heard him shoot, and soon In anger reached the spot! He talked of law, and this and that, But Thompson meekly said, "I'll pay the price, my injured friend; Pray do not lose your head."
