Salem Man Who Is Putting the Post um Cereal Concoction Out of Business

The Iowa Machine Shops do machine work and brazing, welding and lathe work with scientific accuracy. Makes a specialty of motors that have acquired demoralized characters in their inward parts.

When the sun is shining in the west there is the fine aromatic smell of fresh roast coffee about the neighborhood of Mission and Commercial streets, the real aromatic odor that used to hang about mother's kitchen when she brewed the weekly batch of Java coffee beans. Dr. Hagel, the inventor and discoverer of Cereol is pulling off another roasting of his famous non-poisonous food coffee. Cereol at the big red factory building on the east side of the street near Mission. He is putting Postum out of business and giving coffee poison its final fatal sleep. This is the only substitute for coffee that defies the most critical judgment. When mixed with cream or condensed milk it will deceive the professionals who preside at church societies where coffee is often the only good thing served. The Doctor's invention takes the market wherever introduced and bids fair to be Salem's largest manufacturing industry.

The Commercial Cider Co. has the audacity and up-to-dateness to turn out fresh loganberry juice while you wait so you can take it home for dinner. The only right way to eat a loganberry is to drink it says the manager, Mr. Gregory.

Capital City Flouring Mills makes the "Perfection Flour." The flour of ultimate universality, was suggested as a slogan by the advertising man who gets up this page. Bryant and Prunk nearly fainted away.

Basick and Son began the grocery business in a modest way on Seventeenth street and now run the model White Grocery in the D'Arcy block on State street, successors to the Meyer Grocery Co. They advertise and carry all Salem made edibles.

Pomeroy, Jeweler. A good Indian. Did you ever see him dressed for it at a masquerade ball? Wearing a half dozen turkey feathers and a strip of buckskin? He does not try to conceal the fact that his prices for jewelry, silverware and repairing are about right.

Frank Shafer is the leathergoods store man, and is known from one end of Oregon to the other as the most accommodating horse furbisher in the state. His smile and the polish of his harness does not come off with the first rain.

Hartman Brothers Co. succeed and retain all the good qualities of the old J. G. Barr jewelry house and have added a lot of their own, besides proposing to put in a new entrance from Liberty street.

The Spaulding Logging Co. carries the largest stock of building materials that can be found in western Oregon, including a full line of hard wood interior finishing material.

The Falls City Lumber Co. recently doubled its capital and makes a specialty of made-in-Oregon building stock, and has the local sales agency of the Portland-Oswego cement.

The Salem Royal Bakery has built up a wide shipping trade over the Willamette valley, and they are making a great hit with their patent process Pan Dandy bread, something entirely new.

Marion butter, Marion ice cream and Marion Creamery products are the creation of Frank Deekbaeh, who is not only a past master in creating delicacies for the palate but Salem's Cherry Pair King King.

The Townsend Creamery makes the White Clover butter, White Clover ice cream, and the finest line of dairy products are sold over their counters. The White Clover buttermilk is taking the place of stronger beverages with many a white winged citizen.

The Jim Dorrance automobile paint shop makes a Ford look like a real car for from ten to twelve dollars, and bucketful of satisfaction thrown in for good measure to keep peace in the family.

Col. Olmstead was one of the original founders of Salem as an industrial and business center can finish anything from a swiss cheese peckaboo shirt waist to properly ironing out the wings of a flying machine.

The Indiana silo, the patent of which is owned by the Spaulding Logging Co. for all the territory west of the Rocky Mountains, bids fair under the energetic management of Mr. Smith to take the lead of all animal slaughter containers on this coast.

The Red Cross Pharmacy is William Prunk's place on State street and he makes it so pleasant that many people feel as if they would be thankful to be taken with a pain when they get along about there if it were only painful enough so they would have to be carried in there and get the polite and attentive service he furnishes to all.

Nothing raises bread and cake quite so light and sweet as Eppley Perfection Baking Powder. It has also raised Mr. Eppley as a manufacturer to the head of a large business. The best thing about Eppley and his Baking Powder is that they are best liked in the neighborhood where his store and Bertha M. Peoples, pastor in charge. West Woodburn Storm. (Capital Journal Special Service.) West Woodburn, Ore., July 1.—During the lightning and thunder storm yesterday a bolt of lightning hit an electric wire running into the depot building and put all the station lights out of commission. Both the outside and the inside of the wall where the wire cut the building around the wire is all black. Mr. Victor Demaree was on the platform and says it was some crash and the building trembled quite a bit. He was shaken some himself. Mr. W. B. Scollard and family, A. B. Crosby and family, and the John McCormick family went to Clackamas last Sunday to pay their respects to the members of Company I. They reported all the Woodburn boys anxious to be on their way to Mexico.
