Militia Gets Acquainted With Lizards, Horn Toads And Other Border Fauna

By Webb C. Miller.
(United Press staff correspondent.)

Columbus, N. M., July 3.—The militiaman has made good here. Several hundred of them—the censorship does not permit a mention of the eastern states they come from—started their first day on border duty eating, either standing or sitting in the sand, a breakfast of fried potatoes, bacon, eggs and coffee. Later mess barracks will be erected for the militiamen.

"They'll do," said the hardened regular army officers. These officers had yesterday seen the national guardsmen often despised, off despised of regular enlisted men, climb out of stuffy cars after six days travel on the railroads. Weary, grimy and stiff, the boys from eastern cities quickly formed in line and swung briskly through deep dust to be drawn up at attention before the low adobe headquarters building.

All the regulars in camp now hurried out to look over the new comers. Every militiaman appeared to be in good trim and their equipment was complete. Their city pallor alone outwardly distinguished them from the regulars.

At a command from their officers, the national guardsmen marched to the camp. The sinking sun was still withering. Two men dropped as they swung along. The doctors said it was from the effects of the altitude and heat. The camp site of the militiamen is a bare stretch of baked earth on the edge of mesquite plains. Lizards and horned toads abound in the camp.

A Change of Scenery.
Before dark rows of khaki colored tents were up and cook wagons were simmering. "Dog tired," the militiamen lined up at mess kits and were given their first meal in nearly 24 hours.

The men walked as few steps as possible after getting their "chow," squatted in the nearest open space, ate with no lost motions.

Shortly after dark another section pulled in. This time the regulars gathered and cheered the civilian soldiers. The second section erected tents in the darkness and had a late supper.

At 5 a. m. today the trumpeter rolled the men out of their pup tents. The men could then take a good look at the new temporary home. It was a strange sight to eyes accustomed to grass, trees, asphalt streets and other city signs. Across the desert stretching behind the Mexican border hung the Sierra Madre of Chihuahua, silhouetted in blue against the horizon. At the feet of the militiamen rolled the barren desert with clumps of stunted mesquite bushes. Back of them lay the town of Columbus with huddled pine buildings and adobe shacks.

Although still early the sun blazed, reflected from the sand. Squads were told to complete pitching tents and put the camp in final military trim.

Censorship is Strict.
By Webb C. Miller.
(United Press staff correspondent.)
Columbus, N. M., July 3.—Militia movements were taking place along the border today under the eyes of spies and secret service agents of the Carranza government, it is believed.

Explaining the strict censorship which does not permit mention of the regiments or the positions of national guardsmen detained here, Captain Louis Van Schanck said:

"The censorship of militia movements was inaugurated to prevent Carranza agents on this side of the border from obtaining information."
During the night long troop trains passed through here distributing militiamen at various points. Van Schanck, with several American secret service men at the Columbus camp, is watching the activities of suspected Carranza emissaries. Several Mexicans have recently been arrested and deported.

National guardsmen whose first thought was to write the folks back home are wondering whether the censorship will be extended to their letters.

Trying to Settle Longshoremen Row

San Francisco, July 3.—Peace conferences between striking longshoremen and the employers were at a stand still today on account of the sickness of J. J. Foley, president of the International Longshoremen's association. Henry M. White, federal mediator, is still trying to bring about a successful arbitration meeting and expects to preside at a session tomorrow. A few produce boats operated on the Sacramento river, with non-union crews.

DEATH OF MRS. THIESSEN

Jefferson people were shocked to learn yesterday morning of the death of Mrs. Claus Thiesen at her home just across the river from this city. She had been in town a few hours previously, in her usual health. About 10 p. m. Wednesday evening she said she could not breathe easy. Her husband and daughter assisted her to a lounge on an outside porch, when, with the remark, "I can't stand this," she passed away. Mrs. Thiesen was a faithful wife, a loving mother and a good neighbor. She was aged but 48 years. She was married to Claus Thiesen in December, 1890, and came with him in 1891 to Jefferson, where they have since resided. She leaves to mourn her early death a husband, 5 daughters, father, 7 brothers, 3 sisters and hundreds of friends. Funeral services will be held at the Catholic church, of which deceased was a faithful member.—Jefferson Review.

PAVING AT MONMOUTH

Monmouth, Or., July 3.—Monmouth just at present, is thoroughly interested in plans to improve the city. Since the installation of city water service four years ago, a persistent effort has been made to get street paving started and at the meeting of the city council last week a contract was entered into with Hoskins & Hobson, of McMinnville, to do this work. Less than 7 per cent of the property, owned by local people, joined in the usual remonstrance to prevent the improvement. The remonstrance contained signatures of only 40 per cent of the affected property and the remaining 33 per cent of the remonstrators was composed of non-residents of the city. With the development of the dairy interests of this section of Polk county and the natural growth of the state normal school citizens of the community see new activity ahead.

The city has been unspoiled in its growth and now local men are planning to direct its growth in harmony with ideals of civic beauty. To this end a survey will be made and a plan of development presented to the authorities.

WOOL WAS NOT SOLD

The 7000 fleeces in the hands of the Silverton Wool Pool were not sold at the sale held in this city Saturday. Offers were made for the wool but the price did not come up to the mark desired. The price offered was not divulged. While the lot will be sold if the proper prices is made, no more sales will be held for the present, at least. New lots are being added to the present holdings from time to time and no sleep is being lost in waiting.—Silverton Appeal.

Two dogs were caught in the act of chasing Mr. Savage's sheep on the Peck farm last Sunday and as the dogs were known to belong to one of the neighbors it is likely they will be executed regardless of the abolishment of capital punishment. The following day two more dogs were caught trying to kill some of Mr. Donkers' goats. They were also chased to their respective homes and paid the penalty by standing up before the firing squad. Mr. Donker, a few days before had found some of his kids that had been killed by dogs, presumably the same dogs—while in an adjoining pasture. H. C. Porter has lost all the kids from a band of some 20 or 25 nannies. The question is, how can a farmer protect his flocks from dogs, when hunters roam promiscuously with their worthless curs regardless of trespass notices?
