Washington, July 15.—Women are barred from the naval militia and motor boat reserve cruise and manoeuvres scheduled to begin today among the naval militia of nineteen states under the direction of the navy department. The cruise will last until July 29th.

The original plan was to have the battleships Maine, New Jersey, Kentucky receive the New York and New Jersey naval militia at New York, cruising to sea and to Block Island Sound and back; while the battleships Kearsarge and Virginia were to go to Boston to receive the militia from Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine and Rhode Island; while the battleships Alabama, Illinois and Rhode Island at Philadelphia received the militia of Illinois, Maryland, District of Columbia, Michigan, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Minnesota, Missouri and Ohio, and the battleship Louisiana at Hampton Roads received the militia of Virginia, Florida, Louisiana, North Carolina, Louisiana, North Carolina and Texas. But since the Mexican situation has become acute, other ships may be used for the cruise.

Siberian Co-Operative Societies Grow Rapidly And Performed Great Work

By William Philip Stimms. (United Press Staff Correspondent.) Petrograd, June 16.—(By mail)—“Until now, we Russians have been practically dependent upon Siberian dealers as a market. These dealers did not pay cash. They exchanged merchandise for butter, paying whatever price they pleased and charging anything they wanted for their merchandise.”

I have just had an interview with that great friend of Russia, Nicholas Tehaykovsky, member of the Central Co-operative Committee of Petrograd and well known in the United States, where ten years ago he founded American committees in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Denver and elsewhere.

Tired as a revolutionist and acquitted after being liberated from prison on bail furnished principally by English and American friends, the old man is now the happiest soul in all Russia. All his life he has tried to help the people. Now he believes he is succeeding, as Co-operative Society organizer, “building on rock,” because the foundation of the nation, the peasants—who constitute 80 per cent of the population are progressing.

I found Tehaykovsky at his desk in the headquarters building of the Central Co-operative committee, 38 Zhukovskaya. His snow-white head was bent over a pile of papers and his long, silvery beard fell below the edge of the desk by some inches. As I entered he looked up, his rather delicate face beaming with pleasure.

“Please sit down,” he said. Lighting a Russian cubec with a patented lighter, he told the story of the greatest co-operative institution in the world, an institution which is working wonders for the peasants, consequently for the Empire as a whole.

It seems that the first attempts at co-operation began, as did the Zemstvo institutions, about 1865, shortly after serfdom was abolished and half the land turned over to the now free peasants. These attempts took the form of co-operative credit concerns but, though numerous, each was independent of the others and remained for a long time quite feeble.

In 1870 Prince Vassilichikoff became interested and, with M. Yakouloff, of Moscow, founded in that city a committee for Village Co-operative Society work the object of which was to promote co-operative societies all over the empire, get them started, advise them and help them keep going.

The Petrograd Department, as it is called, was opened two years later and soon outstripped the parent concern which for many years stood practically still. The Russian government encouraged the movement at first, helping it get under way though until recent years progress was still below.

In the last 10 years the Societies have grown like mushrooms. There are now over 14,000 of them and, in addition to the credit co-operatives, there are agricultural (producers) and Consumers’ societies from one end of the country to the other.

In Siberia alone there are more than 1,500 Societies, all three kinds—credit, producers and consumers—being strongly represented. They own their own lines of steamers, do these Siberian societies; have their own bank in London and despite the war did an eighteen million dollar business in 1915.

You have heard a lot about one side of Siberia; what about the other? The growth of the Siberian co-operative societies is typical of the rest. Butter is the principal product dealt in by the peasants there and, after they had been helped in their business by the society first to be formed, they felt the need of the market. Private butter concerns existed in sufficiently large number there and their methods of doing business were no cleaner as a rule than butter—which was putrid. They faked up all sorts of filthy substances and sold it as butter and after a time the peasants, who had found markets difficult enough already, saw what little there was so glimmering because Siberian butter had become synonymous with all that was worthless and dangerous and bad.

Girls Take Men's Places on Government Jobs

(By United Press.) London, July 15.—Whitehall, Great Britain's official governmental nerve center, is soon to be ruled by women, it was announced today.

With conscription enacted, steps are being taken to clear all government departments of young men eligible for military service. Women are being trained to take their places.

In exceptional cases a few governmental offices will retain their indispensable males but the latter will remain principally to train the women.

Hundreds of men who have been basked behind the official jobs for 30 months already have been given their 10 days grace to arrange business and domestic affairs.

An official census for April elicited that 1,022 single military eligibles were employed in the admiralty alone; 1,032 in the board of trade; 623 in the war office; 465 in the ministry of munitions; 145 in the board of education; 2,302 customs; 1,780 inland revenue; and hundreds more in other departments in addition to the postoffice where single and married eligibles numbered 31,900.

Saps 90 Per Cent of Carmen Will Quit

San Francisco, July 14.—Despite the statement of President Lillenthal, of the United Railroads, that there is no danger of a strike of the platform men of that company, Thomas Mooney, organizer of the Amalgamation of Street Railway Employees declared today that 90 per cent of the carmen have agreed to quit tonight. United Railroads officials ridiculed this claim.

An appeal for special police protection was made to Chief of Police White today by General Manager Pohl and District Superintendent Jones of the street car company. They told White that trouble might come, particularly on Market street.

At a meeting last night the jitney bus union endorsed the proposed strike. Mooney says, and promised to provide $1 per man per car each day for the support of a strike.

TRAVELERS' GUIDE

Table with columns for SOUTHERN PACIFIC, OREGON ELECTRIC RAILWAY CO., and WILLAMETTE RIVER ROUTE. Lists train numbers, destinations, and departure times.

March beat February with orders for 9,331,001 tons, and April beat March with orders for 9,829,551 tons and the tide is still rising, the flood of which seemingly is far in the future. During the month of April the United States Steel corporation delivered from its mills finished products amounting to $1,000,000 worth of goods exceeding the shipment by about 20,000 tons. I believe the United States Steel is the largest private corporation in the world. Its business is enormous and it pays a wage as high as any like concern in our country. Does any rational man believe that this concern, with hundreds of millions of money at its command, needs protection from paupers, the Lord knows whom, located the Lord knows where? Why, not even a mollycoddle believes that!

STRIKE BROKEN AT BANDON

Bandon, Or., July 14.—Members of the local longshoremen's union today are loading the steamers Elizabeth and Bandon, and are receiving the same scale of wages paid to them before the coastwise strike was called. Their return to work automatically severs their connection with the coast division of the longshoremen's union.
