Went of the afternoon, the order was given for the infantry to leave their trenches. The spectacle of these hardy warriors as they bounded forth to the fray recalled the heroes of legendry lore. Thousands of their front ranks wore around their helmets a floral garland, specially woven by the women of Thiene, Schio, Vorastica and Vicenza. With the stirring war cry 'Great Italy forever!' they bounded arrows the dales at the bridgehead and further down scaled the lines of Carso plateau, engaging in hand to hand struggles. At the head of the main forces ran men bearing aloft big white disks mounted on slender gray green poles so as to guide the ganners in lifting their range as the infantry advanced.''
