Chicago, Sept. 29.—Japan is friendly to the United States, but in the days that follow the end of the world war will be her leading commercial competitor, according to E. H. It was the issue of American rights on which the republican presidential candidate laid most stress today—this and the moral issue of whether or not and the moral issue of whether or not there should be, according to the re-publican beliefs, a surrender to the principle of force, exemplified in the Adamson enactment of the eight-hour bill. In between he mixed a sermon on a protective tariff, solemnly warn-ing his audience that in the days to follow the European war America would have to watch carefully if she was to maintain her place in the fore-front of nations of the world.
