noon were Mrs. Patton and Mrs. Ered S. Stewart. A social hour followed the meeting, which was presided over by Mrs. Alice H. Dodd, president.

Cards have been issued by the board of trustees of the Willamette University for the inauguration of Carl Stregg Doney, Ph. D., L.L. D., as president of the university on Friday, October the thirteenth at the First Methodist church.

If the campaign of education and organization, as planned and engineered by Mrs. Alice Weister of Portland, and backed up by the Salem Woman's club and every woman's club in the state, is carried out to a successful conclusion, before another state fair rolls around, there will be a handsome woman's building to grace the fair grounds which will combine every comfort and convenience so dear to the fair sex and it will house one of the biggest and most comprehensive art exhibits ever assembled under one roof in the northwest.

The Salem Woman's club has taken upon itself the responsibility of initiating the movement for a woman's building at the state fair and Mrs. Alice Weister, superintendent of the art department for the past two expositions, will fire the first gun in a campaign for the organization of a statewide art association at the annual convention of the Federation of Woman's clubs, which meets at Seaside, October 9 to 12, inclusive. In this connection Mrs. Weister proposes to form an organization in every city, town and hamlet in the state each to comprise a unit of the state art association and it will be the duty of these local organizations to preach the gospel of art in their respective communities and collect an exhibit of the handiwork of boys, girls, men and women to send to next year's state fair.

"I wish I could burn the word 'art'," declared Mrs. Weister, upon the eve of her departure for Portland at the close of the fair. "It is such a difficult word to interpret and does not begin to convey what it truly represents. So many people look upon art as a useless vocation designed for the purpose of empty decoration and the expensive pastime of the idle and shiftless. If I could only find a substitute for the word which would comprehend the almost limitless field of its practicability and usefulness. Art, in its true and broader sense, implies everything that will inculcate the love of beauty and refinement; it furms the very foundation of our industries and we could not exist without it. Art and morals go hand in hand.

Through the medium of the Oregon Art association we hope to arouse statewide interest in the work of education and do not propose to stop until Oregon takes her place among the leading states of the Union in the development of art. The association will comprise 200 or 300 women in its membership and all local organizations will be under the jurisdiction of the Federation of Woman's clubs. Many prominent women of Salem, Dallas, Sheridan, McMinnville, Newberg, Albany, Eugene and other big cities and towns in the Willamette valley, who visited the art exhibit this year, have already volunteered their services, displaying encouraging enthusiasm and the movement is bound to succeed. When the women take hold of a justifiable and meritorious cause there is no such word as 'fail'.

"It will be the duty of each local organization to push some line or lines of work, which represent some particular branch of the big art family. It will include weaving of all kinds, basketry, carving, engraving, cartooning, designing, book cover work, sculpture, painting, decorating, ivory, china painting and all branches of children's industrial work in the schools and at home. The work of each organization will be brought to the state fair and some representative of the community will be called upon to give a talk, these talks to be held every day of the fair, in the nature of a report of progress, drawbacks, criticisms, etc., for the benefit of the others; and well known art celebrities will be engaged to deliver lectures and expert criticism every day in the art auditorium for the benefit of all concerned and interested. The state fair board will extend its hearty cooperation in the work and a series of special prizes will be offered as a means of stimulating interest and enthusiasm among the different communities of the state. This competition will be altogether friendly and designed to encourage community effort and every one will be exercised to prevent the stirring up of strife or petty jealousies between communities.

While the exhibits in the art department of this year's state fair was very creditable and attracted much attention it by no means represented what Mrs. Weister hopes to accomplish, but in this respect, she was confronted with numerous handicaps the most prominent of which was her inability to make a canvass of the state, as she contemplated, on account of the lack of funds available and the fact that the present art department is not situated in an absolutely fireproof building and she was unable to secure the loan of numerous collections of masterpieces which she had in prospect. She is, however, very grateful in the art museum of Portland, and the Frame Shop of Seaside, for the loan of many beautiful works in painting, sculpture, designing, etc., for the decoration of the department. With an absolutely fireproof building for the housing of the art department, such as the Woman's club of Salem has in view, Mrs. Weister promises to put up a display representing every conceivable branch of the work as such as has never been seen in the state.
