national ticket, either as president or, more frequently, as vice-president, to preserve the balance of power and harmony between the sections...

In this period of our history there was no west as we know it today. There were then but two great divisions, or sections, of our country: north and south...

As new states were added to the Union, they were of necessity formed from territory south or west of the original thirteen...

as rivals for the seat soon to be vacated by James Monroe. Neither was then successful, but their candidacy served to show how tenacious the original thirteen were of their supremacy...

The original alignment, as we have seen, was between the south and the north. In 1861, after a quarter of a century of agitation and struggle...

Up to 1826 greater stretch of territory north of the Ohio had presented no candidate to the nation for either president or vice; but in that year she completed the work begun in 1824...

and Tyler too' defeating him overwhelmingly. But Harrison died at the White House less than a month from his inauguration...

New York Elected Polk. The election of 1844 witnessed the third and last attempt of Henry Clay to secure the presidency...

Encouraged by her success with Harrison, a military hero, in 1840, the west in 1848 presented another candidate in the person of General Lewis Cass...

Beaten with Scott, a southern military hero, the west again sought the triumph of a sectional party...

Away back in March 1850, William H. Seward of New York, when speaking in the senate in favor of the admission of California into the Union...

The Mag is Recast. Mr. Lincoln's rivals were three in number, and powerful: Douglas (born in Vermont) and H. V. Johnson of Georgia...

War legislated; and our Civil War which followed had upon the inauguration of Mr. Lincoln, disturbed and recast our political map...

A study of our political history since 1860 reveals, not only the continued existence of this antagonism between east and west but the still more striking fact that Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and New York, the Big four, have furnished nearly all our candidates...

In 1861 the republicans renominated Lincoln, putting Andrew Johnson, a Tennessee war democrat, upon the ticket with him...

Fremont wrote. Lincoln had a good majority of the popular vote and an overwhelming one of the electoral; and was the first man to be re-elected by the north or west.

The Big Four Candidates. In 1868 saw the candidates of both great parties taken from the same territory—General U. S. Grant, born in Ohio...

1872 saw Grant's re-nomination and re-election. Henry Wilson, a Massachusetts senator, born in New Hampshire, was associated with him...

The Hayes Election. The republicans in 1876 selected Governor Rutherford B. Hayes of Ohio and William A. Wheeler of New York...

At that, Coach Joe didn't have anything on Gilmour Dobie, Washington gridiron mentor...

George Smith, Captain Seagraves and Ben Mayfield of the varsity eleven are all reported as being hoarse from combat...

The Aggie workout yesterday was not much. The team's baggage went astray and the hunkies did their worst...

The Cuba Cane Sugar corporation has applied to the New York Stock Exchange for the listing of an additional 500,000 shares of the common stock.

Maine's Only Candidate. The republican party in 1881, for the first time in its history, selected its presidential candidate from the east...
