Few Voted at Quinaby

(Capital Journal Special Service.)
Quinaby, Ore., Nov. 11.—Howard and Sam Weiss left a few days ago for San Francisco where they will be employed this winter.
The election drew but few farmers from their labors in this vicinity and the number of women voting was very small. This was due in a large measure to the fact that when the new voting district of Quinaby was created the thickly settled portion of the country just east of the Oregon Electric station was not included, so that the persons living there are obliged to go to Brooks, some three miles distant, although living within a stone's throw of the polls at Quinaby. The extreme bad condition of the roads had also a great deal to do with it, as Quinaby has no road supervisor since the removal of Brown Penny to Oklahoma. Portions of the country promise to become impassable before spring.

Mrs. Robena Ector, who had $400 left after paying Attorney Holman $400 for collecting her $800 pension, is erecting a new house. The work is being done by Thomas Larsen and when completed will be a comfortable cottage.
Mrs. Thomas Larsen entertained the Quinaby Ladies Aid Society Wednesday. Refreshments were served and needlework occupied the women during the afternoon.
August Banick is suffering from a broken finger, the same having been caught in a granary door as the wind blew it shut.
Mrs. Herman Amort (Minnie Banick) who has been critically ill at her home at Fruitland, is somewhat improved.

Many beautiful gifts were received by the young lady who has in so short a time become a part of the social life of the little city on the Santiam. Dainty refreshments were served and dancing and cards furnished amusement during the evening. The guests were:

Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Ed McCormick and little daughter Eva, Mr. Rollie Hammer, Mrs. Mabel Hall and little daughter Mabel, Mr. Newman, Mrs. James, Mrs. Huff, Mrs. Fairclerk, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Earthquake Shook British Columbia

Fernie, B. C., Nov. 11.—Relief gangs are working feverishly but almost hopelessly today in number one east a, to reach John Janiak, the only victim of a number of cave-ins which resulted from a remarkable series of seismic disturbances which occurred Thursday. Janiak is probably dead but if still living is not expected to survive during the days and possibly weeks it will take to reach him. Chief Inspector Graham has arrived from Victoria and is examining the damaged workings. Work has ceased in all the mines, very few men responding to the call to resume after the shake-up.

University Notes

Impressive and appealing to the best receptive sense of dramatic art is the coming of the opening number of the Class Room theatre movement to the Grand theatre on November 22. Here will be revealed the glory of the ancients, the days before Babylon fell, all interpreted in costumes which are exact replicas of the time represented. Great care is being taken by Prof. Wallace MacMurray who is introducing the community theatre to Salem this winter, that the manners and customs of those ancient peoples will be mirrored and interpreted in all their pristine splendor. Original sources have been searched for examples of the costumes so that none of the atmosphere will be lacking which is essential to the presentation. Costumes have been ordered direct from Seattle as none representative could be secured in Portland.
Of stately hue and regal splendor will be the king's cloak of purple and ermine. Blending with striking contrast will also be the sombre gowns of the prophets as compared with the gaily colored garments of the attendants and courtiers. All of the 14 character roles are being worked out with the same dramatic precision.
The play, "The Golden Doom" from the pen of Lord Dunsany, England's interesting playwright, is of one act and one scene, being laid before the massive door which guards the entrance to the king's estate at Zericon, Babylonia. Lord Dunsany has caught the spirit of things really theatrical in the play and it is his credit that its long presentation at Haymarket theatre, London, England, was most successful. The cast which has been practicing for several weeks expect to give their first dress rehearsal next week. The interest which they have manifested in the production speaks for its popularity on November 22.
Professor MacMurray has chosen this play to illustrate his lecture "The Drama of Symbolism" which judging from the cultural merit of the professor's previous lectures will be of much interest. Mr. Hartridge Whipp of Portland will also give a half hour of song as a preliminary to the lecture and play.
Like a hospital scene in the war zone are the sessions of Coach R. L. Matthews classes in "First Aid to the Injured." This week the members of the class applied bandages of every description to the various bodily extremities and appendages so that every emergency may be met on occasion. The intense practicality of the course makes it one of the most popular in the curriculum.
Considerable interest is being evoked in Professor Von Eschen's class in sanitary and household chemistry by the genial professor make it a requisite of the course that every member shall personally bake a loaf of bread in the near future. To stimulate competition for the best loaf the professor offers a prize of one dollar to the baker. As there are three men enrolled for the course, the doughy connections promise to be of various grades of bread when finished. No bets as yet have been made in regard to the prospective winners.

Prominent Men of Salem

W. W. MOORE

W. W. Moore was born in Missouri and raised in Kansas as a farmer-boy. Since coming to Salem he has steadily acquired a large circle of friends in business and social life, that attest his genial good nature and optimistic spirit. He is a director of the Salem Bank of Commerce. He has built one of Salem's finest business structures, the Moore building on Court street, and enjoys a thrifty and growing furniture trade. He has great faith in Salem's future and his wholesome boasting has helped remove the verdure from many paid; a bill collector would find poor picking in collecting election bets.

Undoubtedly the hottest and largest bonfire in years was the verdict pronounced by the enthusiastic group of students who witnessed the exit of an enormous pile of Salem's inflammable debris last night on Willamette field. Centered around a tall pole, the freshmen had built a pyramid of boxes which would have put Egypt's immortal relics of the past to shame. Fireworks from the top of the pole ushered in the lighting, after which spin wheels sizzled as the flames crept upward on the oil soaked debris.
A reeling serpentine encircled the fire in Indian pow-wow style and after lusty yell practice cheered the coach, faculty and team members as they mounted the rostrum to stir up "the old fight" that keeps Willamette on the map. More songs and yells and a stunt by the freshmen girls were dispensed and the serpentine headed by the big W crawled down town to advertise today's game. Here all shows in town were rushed and few Salemites are now in ignorance that Sweetland field is the scene of big football this afternoon.

Prof. McMurray, editor of Bo-Craet the new rhetoric magazine, announces that the next issue will be published in January. He is now assembling a very creditable amount of literary material for that issue.

Says Army Wants More Educated Men

High school youths and college men are respectfully invited by the war department to take note of the fact that the army wants men of education who are willing to serve a year in the ranks and then take their chances on a competitive examination for appointment to West Point. The following bulletin has been issued that may be of special interest to the young man who has army aspirations:
It is expected that the War Department will next week announce those candidates who have qualified for appointment to the grade of second lieutenant in the Army in the examination held in August to fill as many as possible of the 1600 vacancies in that position. It is not definitely known how many candidates will be commissioned. The second examination, which began in October, has been completed, and the results will not be known until the middle of December. A third examination will be held on January 29, and a special bulletin has been issued from the adjutant general's office to be distributed among the edu-

It is unnecessary to suffer. Start treatment at once. Get a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla from your nearest druggist. You will be pleased with the results.

cautional institutions and from the various Army recruiting offices with a view to obtaining as many candidates as possible, it being foreseen that probably not more than half of the existing vacancies, if that many, will be filled as the result of the three examinations. Indeed, it looks now as if a large per cent of the 1600 vacancies will remain unfilled July 1, on which date additional vacancies will be created by the second increment of Army increase that then occurs. Applicant who desire to take the examination of January 29, should forward their applications to the adjutant general of the Army at as early date as possible and, in any event, in time to reach the War Department not later than January 15, as applications received after that date may be too late for proper consideration in connection with this examination.
The base pay per year of a second lieutenant in the Army is $4700.
