It takes more than a wooden head to produce thoughts that will burn.

"Contentment abides with the truth," says the old adage, but very few men are in a position to vouch for the truth of it.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly falling to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address: 22 J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. Sell it—Journal want ads will sell it.

University Notes

Shattering many popular beliefs and undermining the generally accepted historical facts of the centuries, Dr. Geo. H. Alden, dean of the college of liberal arts of Willamette university, had some very surprising "Historical Lies" to present to the large audience which greeted him last night in Waller chapel. The lecture, which was the second of this winter's faculty series, was intensely entertaining both in subject and in its revelations of the strange workings of the biographers and historians' minds and pens.

Dr. Alden said in part: "I have no sympathy with Napoleon's famous statement that 'History is as the agreed upon' nor with the position taken by Walpole who said, 'Anything but history, for history must be false.' The day has certainly past when we accept as gospel truth everything that we find on the printed page. In recent years, students of history have grown bold enough to demand the evidence substantiating practically all historical statements. Many a story, hallowed by age, fortified in constant repetitions by historical writers, and even drilled into the minds of multitudes of pupils by well meaning teachers, has been found wanting when weighed in the balance of critical investigation.

"If the Norse discovery of America rested merely on the evidence of the old Newport tower, the inscriptions on Dighton rock and the skeleton in armor, we would have to place this ancient account in the same category with Captain Cook's discovery of the North Pole, as all three of those historic evidences have been pretty well disproved. "It is very difficult to account for the origin of the falsehood that Queen Isabella pawned her jewels for the money with which to equip the famous expedition of Columbus. Not only is there no evidence of this in any record, but it is known now that if the queen could have raised any money on her jewels, she had already pawned them in the supreme effort she had just made to overthrow Moorish rule in Southern Spain. This view is generally held by all late historians.

"Many people have forgotten all they ever knew of the early history of Virginia except the dramatic rescue of Captain John Smith by Pocahontas as she threw herself on his neck just as the Indian executioner was about to beat his brains out with a club. It was with a distinct feeling of almost personal loss that I was brought to doubt this story, I am glad to say it has not been entirely disproved.

"I heard a well known professor in the university of Chicago remark that he would give $1000 if thereby he could eradicate from his mind some of the misconceptions of mediæval life which he had received when a boy from reading and rereading Scott's 'Ivanhoe.' "It is related of the great English statesman, William Pitt, that the news of Napoleon's overwhelming victory at Austerlitz, reaching him on his bed of sickness, proved his death blow, and that dying, his last words were, 'Roll up the map of Europe; it will not be wanted these ten years.' But it is the testimony of his nurse that his last words were, 'Gruel, gruel, give me more gruel.'"

Of special interest to dwellers in the ether and builders of air castles in the land that never was is the aviator program of the Websterian literary society for next Thursday evening. Karl Chapel is scheduled to start the soaring discussion with "The Curtiss Aviation School" and Louis Hepp is to follow with an explanation of the origin of the violin by Arvid Peterburlesque on the violin by Earl Cotton. Concluding the program proper will be a talk on the why and wherefore of the balloon by Frosty Olson, and parliamentary practice with Harold Eakin in the chair.

Installation of officers will be a feature of the evening's program. The list includes Maxwell Ball, president; Errol Proctor, vice president; Arvid Peterson, corresponding secretary; Karl Chapler, recording secretary; James Ewing, treasurer; Alpheus Gillette, critic and Laban Steeves, marshal.

Pleasing in its promise of early materialization was the announcement of President Doney from the chapel rostrum Monday morning that an anonymous benefactor of the institution has donated $6000 toward the creation of a new women's dormitory. The obvious need of accommodations is so pressing that any apparent success in the effort to raise a substantial amount toward its creation is greatly appreciated. The student applause echoed the hopes of further benefactors coming to the rescue in the near future.
