FARMER WAXES FAT BUT IS NO JESHURON

That Personage Waxed Fat and Kicked, But No Kicking Now

No wonder the farmer smiles and rather looks at his city brothers with pity when there is a discussion of the high cost of living. The farmer apparently is the only man in this week of the woods who has about everything coming his way.

Of course, shoes cost perhaps from 50 to 75 cents a pair more than a year ago and a few other items of wearing apparel have climbed up a notch or two. But what does that amount to with the price of wheat, on November 23, 1916, quoted at 80 cents a bushel, compared to $1.28 today, with a bigger crop this year than in 1915. And while the price of the moving picture has advanced from ten cents to 15 cents, if the farmer has a large family, why should he worry, as records in today's papers that potatoes are bringing $1.25 a hundred. One year ago he felt lucky to dispose of them at 75 cents a hundred. And on top of this high price, there was the biggest crop for several years, as the 1916 season was an ideal one for spuds.

If thread sells at five cents a spool straight and a nickel cigar is straight instead of six for a quarter, and the collar that was two for a quarter now sells at 15 cents straight, why should the farmer worry as pork is now quoted wholesale at 12½ to 13 cents, while one year ago today the best he could get was seven and one-half cents. And just think of it! Pork on foot was quoted at five and a quarter cents one year ago and now it finds ready sale at from 8½ to 9 cents. Why should the farmer worry?

Of course the scarcity in woolen goods has advanced the price of woolen shirts, sweaters and suits of clothes, but why should the farmer stop to figure the per cent of increase when he can now sell his timothy hay for $16 a ton, compared to $14 one year ago today and his big crop of oats is worth from 42 to 45 cents a bushel, compared to 35 one year ago. And this was a fine year for oats too.

Why should the women folks of the farm do without some extra nice things this winter when the biddy in the poultry yard is laying eggs at the rate of 45 cents a dozen, while one year ago 38 was the best the market afforded. And if the turkey of the farm yard also belongs to the women folks, why should they not have some extra spending money, since now the unfortunate turkey—sometimes called the national bird—struts and gobbles to the tune of 21 cents a pound with feathers on and his internal works in place, and 24 cents a pound, dressed. Last year at this time, the farmyard national bird was singing his farewell song away down in G flat at the rate of 10 cents a pound, including feathers and feet, or 18 cents, dressed. The women folks are entitled to wear furs and all sorts of feathers and attend the movies once a week, as there is prosperity perched on every farm yard tree.

Anyhow, taken by-and-large, coming or going, with the prices fluttering a few cents either way, the farmer can truck sing at the annual Thanksgiving services Thursday, November 30, 1916, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee, Sweet Land of Liberty, Of Thee I Sing."
