

"THAT LITTLE GAME" --- A "What's the Time" Fellow

Monmouth News

(Capital Journal Special Service) Monmouth, Jan. 2.—This year, as usual, the dormitory girls held a Christmas festival in the parlors of the dormitory which were beautifully decorated for the occasion. The idea this year was to show the scenes and customs of our forefathers in New England and their manner of celebrating the Christmas season. The program was given Thursday before Christmas and the faculty were the guests of honor. Promptly at six o'clock a double line of girls were coming down the stairway, stepping to the time of the carol they were singing; they passed down into the reception room and out into the big drawing room, where they circled round the tables until each found her accustomed place. Between the courses the dinner was enlivened with conversation and song. When the dinner hour was over all repaired to the reception room where the center of attraction was the Yale log before the fire place, before which came several girls to express their wishes for the season. Next came four Woodland sprites dancing in beaming gowns with which to light the fire; a maid came with a torch, the log was placed within the fire place and the fire kindled. Then the electric lights were turned out, and by the glow of the Yale log a charming Christmas story was told by Miss Schmidt, who also composed several songs of the evening. The windows were opened and a sound of music, coming nearer and nearer, was heard a package from Miss Marvin was brought in and handed to Miss Tobin, the house president. The package contained a beautifully bound and illustrated copy of "As You Like It," the gift of Miss Marvin to the girls of the dormitory. Splendid music by the Victorians was enjoyed and the whole affair was a very delightful one that will not be easily forgotten by those present.

high school building Thursday evening was a success in every sense of the word. The grand parade of the entire student body through the main streets was a clever advertising stunt which served the purpose admirably. The main feature of the entertainment was the playlet "Box and Cox," the characters were represented by George Walker, Prof. Travenor and Fannie Steinberg, and each played the part well. The several side shows were good and well patronized. The ice cream, candy, soft drink and bakery booths were all well patronized. The affair was gotten up for the purpose of raising money for the new piano purchased by the high school student body last year. It is not known definitely as to how much money was cleared.

MURDER MYSTERY STILL UNSOLVED

Woman Had Many Callers, All of Them "Higher Ups" --Police Change Theory

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 2.—The web of mystery closed tighter this afternoon around the murderer of pretty Mazie Colbert, otherwise known as Mrs. Grace Roberts, whose shapely figure had advertised corsets and stockings the world over. Into the maze of conjecture over the case that has baffled the detective departments of three cities—New York, Chicago and Philadelphia—one, and possibly two women, stepped this afternoon through a statement issued by Captain of Detectives Tate. He declared an arrest "might" be expected today. The detective chief re-told the story of Elwood Powell, a taxi cab chauffeur, who drove a man to the Wilton apartments, in which the little model's mutilated body was found Saturday night. The taxi ride occurred Friday morning—the last day on which Miss Colbert was known to have been alive. Shortly after one o'clock Friday morning, according to Powell's story, a man and two women entered his car at the Bellevue-Stratford.

Women Figure In It. Both women were taken to one of the best parts of Germantown, the car was stopped at a corner and they left. The man then directed Powell to drive to the Wilton apartments. That was 1:30 a. m. and at 9 o'clock the same morning Powell drove off without being paid. Late this afternoon the chauffeur will be taken to Germantown to identify the spot where he left the women. Powell described the man as about 32; five feet, eight inches in height, of dark complexion and unusually well dressed. This description tallies almost exactly with that of a man known to the police only as "the bulldog." A junior at the Wilton dubbed one of Miss Colbert's frequent callers by this title because of his persistence. The "bulldog" is said to be a man well known in Philadelphia, though detectives acknowledge they had little reason to suspect him any more than the scores of other prominent admirers, except for his similarity to the description by Powell. All will be questioned. Even though an arrest is made today police declared the mystery would not be much nearer solution than it was Saturday. Suspicion is the only charge any one could be arrested on now. A series of finger-prints, stamped in blood on walls, clothing, furniture and the dead model's body, however, will aid in identification. While Saturday police believed a jealous lover killed Miss Colbert by crushing her skull with a flat iron and then strangled her with a silk stocking removed from the girl's shapely limb, they had changed today. A prominent man is known to have squandered large sums on her. Now it is believed, the slayer wished to rid himself of the girl. Every one of the score of men Miss Colbert is known to have had as visitors will be questioned. There is not one who does not hold a prominent position.

Market Is Stronger and Prices Advance

New York, Jan. 2.—The New York Evening Sun financial review today said: Following brisk trading and a sharp upturn of 1 to 5 points or more in the early session the stock market backed and filled today. The reply of the entire government to the German overture for peace was seized upon by the long interest as a weapon with which to bull the market, but the movement despite its vigor in the first hour or so of business, did not draw any great degree of public participation into the market. The first session of the stock market and commodities markets this year were strong, and this strength was based on the assumption that peace is further away than it was a week ago. Prices in the stock market went up today, grain advanced with a bound and cotton was strong too. United States Steel crossed 110 for the first time in nearly a fortnight. Anaconda copper nearly reached $4. All the equipment shares advanced 2 to 3 points. The volume of business traded in the first hour was far heavier than in most of the sessions of last week. In the second hour trading was quieter and prices reacted a point or more. After midday however, an upward movement of moderate proportions developed and prices were again about where they were at the beginning. Prices in the late trading were irregularly changed with business light.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You simply say to the drug store man, "Give me a quarter of an ounce of frezone." This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet. A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender, aching corn should relieve the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn root and all, dries up, and can be lifted out with the fingers. This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that, while frezone is sticky, it dries in a moment, and simply shivers up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Don't let father die of infection or lockjaw from whitening at his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

Get Rid of Humors and Avoid Disease

Humors in the blood cause internal derangements that affect the whole system, as well as pimples, boils and other eruptions. They affect all the organs and functions, membranes and tissues, and are directly responsible for the readiness with which some people contract disease. For forty years Hood's Sarsaparilla has been more successful than any other medicine in expelling humors and removing their inward and outward effects. It is distinguished for its thoroughness in purifying the blood, which it carries and lavages away. No other medicine acts like it, for no other medicine is like it. Get Hood's Sarsaparilla today. insist on having Hood's.
