

Fifty-eight per clock-tick

Every time the clock ticks, fifty-eight Fatimas are lighted somewhere in the United States. No other high-grade cigarette has so many unchanging, unswerving friends.

This shows that men do appreciate cigarette-comfort.

For, Fatimas are comfortable. Not only comfortable while you smoke, but more than that, comfortable after you smoke—even though you may smoke the whole day through.

The Fatima Turkish blend is so carefully balanced that it has none of the after-effects of heavier, less skillfully blended tobaccos. That's why Fatimas are comfortable (hence, sensible)—as your first package will prove.

Judge P. H. D'Arcy's Tribute to the Memory of Honorable David W. Craig

While we were absent from Salem during the past few weeks, there passed away a pioneer resident of our city and state, and one who took a prominent part in the history of Oregon, Honorable David W. Craig. He occupied a conspicuous place in our pioneer settlement. Of all the brilliant and notable characters who came to this section in the days when it was difficult to reach here, not one of them was his superior in literary and intellectual attainments. Deprived on account of circumstances and environment of the advantages of the schools in his younger days, by his indomitable will and persistence, he acquired a literary knowledge unsurpassed by any of his contemporaries. The welfare of the nation and this state was the special object of his private and public life. His reputation and character form a striking part of the pioneer, as well as the more recent history of Oregon. He was one of the choice and admirable citizens of pioneer days. Mr. Craig was an ardent and loyal patriot, a friend and admirer of Abraham Lincoln with whom he was acquainted and from whom, no doubt, he imbibed the spirit of his splendid patriotism. He was at all times true to his friends, honor and integrity being his eminent characteristics. When the political future of his beloved Oregon was threatened by designing and unscrupulous politicians, his voice and pen were devoted to the cause of the people.

My acquaintance with him extended over many years and the intense admiration I had for him began when we were associates in his own printing office. In later years that admiration and good opinion, formed when a boy, never changed. He lived a long and useful life, without pretense, and was a firm believer in all that tends to ennoble and sanctify humanity.

Mr. Craig's modesty and retiring nature prevented him from occupying many public places in the history of our state. He would not contend nor

PROMINENT SOCIETY MEN ARE ANXIOUS

Mazie Colbert Murder Mystery Is Still Worrying Many

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—Miss Bessie Colbert, sister of Mazie Colbert, murdered stocking and corset model, and Thomas B. Smith, mayor of Philadelphia, were linked today in the efforts to force a complete solution of the mystery which was believed cleared when Bernard Lewis killed himself.

Prominent society men, clubmen, cafe habitués again are anxiously scanning headlines. The mystery of Mazie Colbert's death is just as much a mystery as ever, and while the police declare they have no reason for believing Bernard Lewis did not kill the pretty model, they are prosecuting vigorously a hunt for the slayer. The renewed activity is at the direct order of Mayor Smith.

Bessie Colbert today issued a statement in which she declared her belief in Lewis' innocence, adding that she had identified several articles presumably connecting him with the crime. Among other things, a bunch of keys she found did not belong to her sister, she said. The police declare her identification of articles would have helped greatly had they been announced ten days ago.

Anonymous letters from persons all over the country are flooding the police department. These missives declare the writers have absolute proof that Bernard Lewis did not kill Mazie Colbert. Some of these place Lewis in cities so far west it would have been impossible for him to go to Atlantic City in time to kill himself on the day he did.

The police are attaching little importance for office. His was a character that would not cringe or fawn for power. He was free from the arts and trickery of the demagogue. He did not assume a knowledge of matters of which he was wholly ignorant. His excellent and manly qualities appealed to all who had a proper respect for the best that is in this world. He lived the simple life in every way. He was a devoted husband, good, kind and indulgent parent. It was an interesting event for one to visit him at his home, and observe him surrounded by his books—the classics being his dearest and favorite companions. He was a veritable encyclopedia of facts and figures. Free from guile and deception, he hesitated in our midst respected and honored by all. His life was one that could well be emulated by the citizens of our state.

My vivid remembrance of his many acts of kindness, as well as his lofty ideals, prompt me to offer this imperfect tribute to his memory, of our departed friend and neighbor it can be truthfully said:

His life was gentle; and the elements so mixed in him that nature might stand up And say to all the world, 'This was a man'

DARCY'S ULTIMATUM EXPIRES TONIGHT

Tex Rickard Must Complete Arrangements Today Or Its All Off

By A. C. Hamilton (United Press staff correspondent) New York, Jan. 9.—Les Darcy's ultimatum to Tex Rickard, demanding that a match be made for him, which was announced in a statement to the United Press Saturday night, will expire today, according to a statement of Tim O'Sullivan, who is looking after Darcy's business interests.

Unless Rickard gives assurance that George Carpentier, the French champion, will come here for a bout in the near future, other arrangements will be made.

O'Sullivan, in making this statement, said he believed Rickard would consent to another match. Darcy has been idle a long time, he declared and wants to get to work.

Rickard has no arena in which to stage the bout, nor has he announced any plans for any match other than the one with Carpentier. If he is planning to profit from Darcy's first encounter in this country, it will be necessary for him to first obtain a suitable arena.

Darcy has been going through daily workouts and declares himself in better health than he was in Australia. It would take only a short time for him to reach the very best condition, he believes, and he wants to show the American public what he can do.

Rickard is out of the city today, but will return tonight, when Darcy and O'Sullivan expect his answer.

Attell, one of the cleverest ring generals of his day, collapsed from exhaustion early in the fourth round. He was unconscious five minutes.

portance to the letters, believing they have been written with hope of financial gain through Lewis' father.

Wenman A. Lewis, father of Bernard Lewis, it was reported today, has found a man who will swear he saw Bernard crawl through a window in the model's apartment Friday night. This, according to Lewis, proves his son, Bernard, was not in the room when the murder was committed.

Up to Lewis Family

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 9.—Many points essential to clearing up the Colbert mystery in Philadelphia will depend upon what the family of Wenman A. Lewis can learn from two men known to them as B. G. Brown of Cleveland and J. L. Marshall of Philadelphia or New York.

Representatives of the family are prosecuting search for those men today.

On Sunday, Brown wrote to the Lewis family, from Cleveland, using Statler hotel stationery, saying that he and a friend witnessed the escape of a man from the apartment of Mazie Colbert in the Wilton and directed the Lewis family to telephone him for further information. At 1835 East Seventeenth street, Cleveland, suite 17, instead, the family sent two men to see Brown personally.

Two others went to locate Marshall who was named by Brown as his companion. He is in the east.

What Salesman Saw

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 9.—A Cleveland salesman was found today who saw the murderer of Mazie Colbert leap from her window. He declared he could identify the man positively but that he will not say until tonight whether Bernard W. Lewis was the man.

The salesman will meet representatives of the Lewis family tonight at 10:30 at which time he will tell all he knows about the case. For personal reasons he will not at this time allow the use of his name.

"I stopped the man as he tried to run past me," said the salesman, "and asked him 'what's the matter?' and he said, 'Oh, I'm just having a little fun,' the man said and broke away."

He carried his overcoat under his arm and appeared excited, the salesman said.

"I studied diagrams of the Wilton apartments as shown in newspapers and determined that the window from which the man leaped was of the apartment in which the girl was killed.

"I can identify the man positively, but won't do it at this time," he said.
