State House News

Chairman Campbell, and Commissioners Carey and Bushnell, of the Oregon public service commission, are in Vale today and will be in Heppner March 1 to hold hearings on train service. They will be gone from Salem all the week.

An order issued by the public service commission this morning compels the Pacific Telegraph and Telephone company at Tillamook to connect with the Tillamook County Mutual Telephone company for the purpose of long distance telephoning. Complaint was filed against the Pacific company charging it with practices unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory in that it refused physical connection. A hearing was held on January 11, 1917, in Tillamook. The order goes into effect on March 15, 1917.

Long distance connection only was desired and there was a general demand for such service. The Pacific company challenged the constitutionality of the act under which the action was brought. It declared that it adequately served the territory and that if it was compelled to connect with the Mutual company it would lose its weapon to fight in competition and so lose subscribers. The commission stated that it believed the contention of the company that it is in a position to furnish adequate service to all at reasonable rates was not well sustained. It also found that the need for the connection was imperative and a public necessity. It ordered that Mutual company install a connecting plant at its own expense and that a charge of ten cents for each long distance call should be made. Also, that each company was to remit to the other company for each interchanged call the sum of five cents.

Articles of incorporation filed this morning with the corporation commissioner are as follows: The Multnomah Development company with a capital of $1000 to deal in real and personal property. The office is in Portland and the incorporators are Ben Riesland, N. H. Atchison and George W. Gearhart. The Chamberlain-McGraw Lumber company with a capital of $1000 to deal in real and personal property. The office is in Portland and the incorporators are Ben Riesland, N. H. Atchison and George W. NO CLUE FOUND TO MISSING BILL NO. 375

It Has Disappeared and Diligent Search Is Still Unrewarded

No clue as to the whereabouts of house bill 375, the new notorious bridge bill, has been found by Chief Clerk Fred Drager, Representatives Al Jones and Charles Elgin, who have been searching high and low, through the mass of bills that they have on hand in the speaker's room, and every place they think it might be hidden. Even Senator Bishop was up to the state house this morning trying to find a solution to the mystery.

It is the opinion of Chief Clerk Drager that the bill may be among the many papers that have been gathered up and sent to the various members of the house, and he has hopes that when this staff reaches the representatives that it will be found. Should it be found, he believes he would have authority to revise it in accordance with the record of the journal and present it to the governor with the signatures of Speaker Stanfield and President Moser and that it would be as legal as if presented while the house was in session.

Must Be Found First He bases his reason on the ground that he and his clerks, under the supervision of Representative Elgin, are authorized to revise and correct the journal and carry out the will of the house. They have twenty days in which to do this. If the bill is found within that time he believes it can be presented to the governor, and that will then be up to him either to sign, veto, or let the measure become a law automatically.

When the session closed, the members were not allowed to clean up their desks. The doors were locked and the clerks packed up each representative's stuff and shipped it to him. In this stuff, the chief clerk believes the bill may be hidden.

If it is not found, the opinion is held that because the chief clerk is there to carry out the will of the company of Talent, with a capital of $3,000 to operate and maintain sawmills in Washington street between the east line of Fir street and the west line of Liberty street, at the expense of the abutting and adjacent property by bringing said portion of Washington street to the established grade, constructing cement concrete curbs and paving said portion of Washington street with a Portland Cement Concrete Block Concrete Pavement six inches thick, in accordance with plans, specifications and estimates for the improvement of said portion of Washington street adopted by the common council on the 5th day of June, 1916, which are now on file in the office of the city recorder, which for greater certainty and a more detailed description are hereby referred to and made a part hereof.

The secretary of state announces that a charge of $75 a page for arguments for or against the measures that will go before the people at the special election on June 4 will be made. The special election is provided by the last legislature on measures that were passed and referred to the people for ratification. The charge is made to cover paper and the cost of printing. This is no small amount as about 325,000 copies have to be printed and distributed.

AN EXPERT ON COLDS

Comparatively few people realize that a cold is a signal of physical weakness. To treat a cold with weakening physics, alcoholic syrups or drugged pills, may smother the cold but they also reduce the body powers still further and invite more serious sickness.

house that he could present a bill with the same wording to the governor for his signature. Although the attorney general has given no indication as to what his opinion in the matter is, he has gone into the case thoroughly.

Forbes Has Not Seen It Representative Vernon A. Forbes, who was chairman of the conference committee to which it is believed the bill was sent, when it was implied that he was holding the bill, denied knowing anything whatever as to its whereabouts. He states his side of the matter as follows:

"I never had the bill; it was never handed over to me, and they never can show my receipt for it. After the refusal of the house to concur in the senate amendment, a conference committee was appointed, of which I was chairman. I left the matter with Al Jones. He prepared the report giving the results of the conference and signed it without going into the committee. I believe that Representatives Jones and Fuller, the other members of the committee from the house, will verify my statement.

"After the adoption of the conference report by the house and the senate, the president of the senate and the speaker of the house should have signed the bill and sent it to the governor. If either of these acts or all of them were not done, I believe that the authority still rests with these officials to perform their duty and end the difficulty."

Market Drags While Congress Parleys

New York, Feb. 27.—The New York Evening Sun financial review today said: While the president was addressing congress relative to authority to act should the occasion arise after the present session expires, a new element in the situation in the sinking of the Cunard liner Laconia was thrust to the fore. Wall Street was concerned mainly with the reception that the presidential requests would receive until it developed that the loss of American lives on the Laconia was likely to supply the overt act in time to give congress an opportunity to act.

Confronted with so many grave influences, the securities markets were quiet and hesitant. Prices as a rule were heavy after an upward movement in the early trading. By the end of the first hour, in which the turnover was something short of 500,000 shares, extreme dullness supervened. Practically all the gains of the morning were wiped out and the general list drifted along fractionally below the previous closing. The equipment and munitions issues had intervals of strength, but net changes were not broad.

The railroad list was neglected and soft for the most part. New Haven reacted more than two points on renewed financing reports.

medal and the same awarded for the exhibit of evaporated logberries. Marion county received the silver medal on Bing cherries and honorable mention on Lambert cherries. It is probable that the diplomas and awards will be distributed among the counties that organized as the Willamette Valley Exposition association.
