It is to be presumed that this change of front will have the effect of stimulating the foreign trade of this country. Bankers in general applaud the wisdon of some such announcement at this

The public, however, is still cautious, having in mind doubtless the course of the markets not so long ago when reac-tions of five to 10 points were the rule after good advances. Except for some strong and weak spots among the spe-cialties, the market did little until midday when the upward movement began.

The steel and copper shares were strong, particularly United States steel, which crossed 112, and American smelting and refining. The shipping and motor shares made substantial gains, the feature being General Motors which gained some seven points in discounting the action of the directors putting the stock on a 12 per cent annual dividend
