LORD NORTHCLIFFE COLLECTS OPINIONS

Says Wilson's Speech Will Rank With Those of Washington and Lincoln

By Lord Northcliffe.
(Written for the United Press.)
London, April 4.—I have taken a few hours to collect opinions of members of both houses of parliament and many of the general public.

Experts in statesmanship regard the president's speech as likely to rank with the most notable utterances of Washington and Lincoln. Its dignity, restraint and insight are considered absolutely worthy of the chief of a hundred million of the republic's citizens at this tremendous moment.

The joining with the allies by the United States is especially welcomed by Englishmen who are fighting side by side with the heroic French.

We regard the coming in of Uncle Sam as the help of another big brother in France's fight against the Prussian bully.

We will be able to take care of our own part of the war on land, on sea, in munitions plants and in the treasury, but the territories of France and Belgium have been chosen by the Hohenzollerns as their battleground for the conquest of the world and it is speaking nations—Americans, British, Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders, South Africans—should combine with Russia and Italy to rid the world of kaiserism—just as the Russian people united against the domination of czarism.

The intervention of the United States is the greatest event in the history of the war since August, 1914.

Wheat Opened Above $2 But Dropped Again

Chicago, April 4.—Wheat opened up today above the $2 mark, the highest of the season. Corn and oats also made new tops. Prospects of congress declaring war and poor crop conditions were responsible for the advance. Later in the day the quotations dropped, wheat going below Monday's close. May wheat opened up 3-8, but subsequently lost 1-8, going to $1.98 7-8. July opened up 1-8, later lost 1-2 and dropping to $1.67 1-2. September opened down 1-2 and later gained 3-8, going to $1.54 3-8.

Corn showed sharp advances in the face of moderate trading. May opened up 1 3-4 later lost 1/4 to $1.23 3-4. July opened up 1 5-8, subsequently

"PRINCESS PAUHI" COMING TO BLIGH

We have all seen versions of the so-called Hula Hula, some of them barely escaping the description of being vulgar, but the true Golden Hula Hula, as danced at Hila, is extremely artistic. A refined version of this dance is a feature of the program presented by the Royal Hawaiian Songbirds at Bligh theatre next Monday and Tuesday, and the interpretation of the Golden Hula Hula, offered by Princess Pauhi, a real native Hawaiian princess, is an exceptionally beautiful one.

National Guard Moves; Destination Is Secret

Portland, Ore., April 4.—Strict censorship yesterday veiled the movements of the Third Oregon infantry. Early in the morning the First battalion, comprising companies A, B, C and D, left Vancouver. The military authorities will not permit publication of the destination of these troops.

Orders moving others of the two battalions remaining at Vancouver are expected at any moment. They will be ready to move as quickly as they can be mustered.

With the military censorship so strict, there is little to be told about the Third Oregon and its activities; beyond the efforts to obtain recruits. About 20 men were enlisted yesterday at the recruiting station on Fourth street, between Washington and Stark.

Colonel John L. May, commanding the regiment, has been authorized to incur expenses incident to sending out recruiting details to various towns. Recruiting parties will probably be sent out at once.

Mayor Evans, of McMinnville, called on George A. White, adjutant-general of the Oregon National Guard, yesterday and promised to do all possible to encourage enlistments in company A of that city, which is one of the two smallest companies in the regiment.

He said several students of McMinnville college wanted to enlist, but desired to obtain college credits for their period of service. The mayor said the question would be taken up with the college authorities.

Germans Blew Little Girl American College Man Was Visiting With, To Pieces

Paris, March 16.—(By mail.)—Many times a day the little band of 55 American college students driving cars for the American ambulance in the Balkans get their fill of the horrors of war.

Ennis Brown of Charleston, S. C., the first of the 55 to return, is here today. He told the story of Robert Montgomery, a Princeton boy from New York city, the only one of the company wounded up to the time he left on his way back to America.

"Our work is in and around Monastir," said Brown, "and might be rough going it is. Over perilous mountain passes and over country no man would think of traveling in peace time. German guns are ceaseless. Even in the town we are constantly strafed. Montgomery was sitting in his ambulance one day talking to a wee tot of a little girl who was interested to know all manner of inconsequent things about the ambulance and Americans in general. As they talked and laughed, a German shell fell, blew the child to pieces and wounded Montgomery. He is now recovering.

"The boys drive their little cars under fire when necessary to carry a spark of human life back to safety where it can have a chance to flume up again.

"Back there in the little English cemetery, at Salonika, is one who will never return. He is Edward Stotwell, Cambridge, Mass., a former student of Harvard, accidentally killed on duty. "We buried him immediately," said Brown. "A French priest conducted the service while we stood around.

"Stotwell was the victim of an auto wreck not long after we arrived at Salonika after a hard voyage on a staff-troop ship down the Mediterranean.

"From Salonika we headed directly for Monastir," added Brown. "We arrived there just after the battle in which allied troops, including the Bulgars, had driven out the Bulgars. Dead were lying everywhere. The Bulgars had retreated to lines north of Monastir and as we drove in they were shelling the town. Bulgar and Turk regulars still occupied many houses and were continuously 'sniping' the soldiers. None of us were hit.

"The real danger commenced when the Germans took over the Bulgar lines to the north. The Germans moved in heavier artillery and gave Monastir its daily deluge of steel. Through their system of espionage and observation it was not safe for even a small Ford ambulance to move through Monastir's crooked streets. Shells would drop just behind our cars as they passed along, the range at times so exact that the explosions would follow the curves and corners.

"The persistent shelling of Monastir finally made it too unhealthy for the American ambulances there. It was necessary to hide the cars in narrow streets and never allow them to be seen in the open squares. The ambulance base was therefore moved to Negozant, south of Monastir, from where we worked, always at night, bringing the wounded back to the base hospitals from the front lines."

Complaint is constantly made that "we are starving in the midst of plenty." But whose plenty?

American College Men Making Name for America in Balkans, Says Carolinan

By Wilbur G. Forrest.
Paris, March 15.—(By mail.)—A little band of American college men are making a name for America in the Balkans today.

This band is composed of more than 50 young Americans who sailed for France about a year ago to become ambulance drivers for the American Ambulance Field Service, under the direction of A. Pitt Andrew, of LaPorte, Ind., and Gloucester, Mass., former assistant secretary of the U. S. treasury.

Two sections of ambulances in addition to many others now working on the western front are with the French armies in the Monastir region of recon-quered southern Serbia. Carrying wounded always at night, over wild roads, through rocky mountain passes and over mountains is only part of the work these American college men are doing, according to Ennis Brown, of Charleston, S. C., who has just reached Paris on his way back to America. Brown joined the ambulance service while a student at Virginia university. He is the first American to return since the Americans embarked at Marseilles for Salonika.

"For months since our allies took Monastir our ambulances have been very busy in the Balkans," Brown told the United Press today. "From our headquarters near Monastir we have carried the wounded from the trenches north of Monastir; from Koritza to the west, where the French blesses come from the front lines by mule back over the mountains and from other points wherever we are directed by the French military authorities. Sometimes it has been necessary to use good strong American arm work to pull even our light American cars over the difficult roads."

"To give some sort of an idea what the wounded are going through, it is sometimes 15 days before a man reaches a good comfortable hospital after he is wounded on the front line west of Koritza. Our ambulances can only penetrate as far as Koritza. Here we take aboard men who have traveled for days on mule back. We then rush them as far as possible toward comfort in the nearest thing to a motor that is found in the Balkans—our little Detroit made ambulance.

Sometimes the American drivers take their cars almost to the front trenches north of Monastir. Usually, however, we can pick up a load in the town itself.

"All drivers are armed with revolvers now on account of the Turkish and Bulgar comitadjis who have no use for Americans. Several drivers, including John Imbrey, of Washington, D. C., have had adventures with them but luckily so far no one has been hurt."

When Brown left the Balkans seven cars of the two sections had been smashed by shells, four of them beyond repair. Among the members of his section were: Arthur Blumenthal, of Wilmington, N. C., famous football star at Princeton in 1915; Loveland Hill, New York City, former Harvard student; Powell Felton, Philadelphia, of the University of Pennsylvania; Charles Baird, of New York City, and many others, mostly Harvard students.

Before Brown went to the Balkans he had driven an American ambulance through the big attack at Verdun last year. The termination of his six months' enlistment and ill health caused him to leave for home. Despite finding himself on a ship en route which was the victim of a submarine in the Mediterranean, Brown reached Toulon and Paris in safety.

The lawmakers at Lansing, the Detroit News says, expect to make Michigan the driest state in the union. Well it ought to be, with water cutting it in two and almost surrounding the two pieces.
