When it comes to remembering what has happened in the grain markets for the past quarter of a century, D. A. White is pretty good authority, and he says that the 40 cents a bushel he offered Saturday for a carload of oats beats the record. While a few cents higher have been offered for a small lot, the 60 cents is the highest carload lot he has offered since he opened for business in 1891.

Members of the reserve corps who will stand examination for commissioning officers will meet this evening at the old armory and be given a physical examination. There will also be the regular drilling and instruction. The board of officers from Corvallis will hold the examination for second lieutenant some evening this week, probably Wednesday. The members of the reserve corps who hope to secure commissions when the raising of a larger army becomes necessary have mostly had active service in military matters or have been with Company M on the border.

H. Steinbock, the proprietor of the "house with a million bargains," on North Commercial street, is of the opinion that every industrious child could earn a little money by saving old papers. He figures that the Sunday issues of almost all papers are worth about one cent at the rate he is paying for old paper, which is three quarters of a cent a pound.

Locks are now placed on the inside of the windows at the state house so that no prowler or conspirator can enter to do damage. The extra locks have been placed on windows where there is a chance that a person could break in. The precaution is taken because it is felt that even in Marion county there might be an hireling of the Kaiser who, on orders, would attempt to rifle the state house or even blow it up. Last night, Sunday, the outside doors at the state house were locked.

At half past three this afternoon the jury was out to deliberate on a verdict in the case of the city of Salem against Terwilliger, undertaker, who is charged with conducting a nuisance in that his undertaking parlors are located in the
