GERMANS GET OUT
to report from the British front today. The German Version. Berlin, via London, June 21.—Capture of a French position at Vauxhallen over a width of more than a mile by a German storming attack, was announced in today's official statement. "The enemy was completely surprised," the war office said. "Some of our troops penetrated as far as the reserves positions. The enemy losses were heavy."

PLAN IS INVASION
first is the style machine America first made and is now making. It is cheap. "The observers' machine, without which effective artillery or any sort of ground fighting is useless, carries only a small machine gun. It is helpless except on enemy batteries, key tab on enemy troop movements, direct artillery fire. During attacks it is only through the observation machine that the staff behind our lines can tell how an attack is progressing. We need thousands more of them. They do their talking to the ground by wireless; they receive instructions via a sort of wigwag system. "But observation work is impossible without battle planes. "It would be the battle planes with which we would invade Germany. We must have thousands and thousands more of them to do it. By using two battle planes to protect each observation plane we can save the reconnaissance planes, but this won't give us air supremacy. To get this supremacy we must put together a great bombing squadron and send them far into German territory."

TWO MILLION TONS LOST SINCE JANUARY
Submarine War Declared February First Shows These Results
New York, June 21.—Germany has sunk about two million tons of British ships since the unlimited submarine warfare was declared on February 1, according to figures cited today by a maritime expert, based on calculations from the official British lists of losses. In the submarine campaign to date the British have lost 642 vessels. Official figures available since March 4, give 336 British ships of more than 1000 tons sunk and 185 of less than that tonnage. From February 1 to 25 the size of the 171 vessels sunk was not officially given. Best information, however, estimated the division as 100 ships of more than 1000 tons and 71 below that figure. This would make a total of 436 large vessels sunk and 206 smaller ones. The average of the 436 large vessels was said by a maritime expert today to be about four thousand tons; that of the smaller 800 tons. This would give the total tonnage of ships of more than 1000 tons thus destroyed at 1,744,000 tons and that of the smaller ships 164,800—a grand total of 1,908,800 tons. The figures do not include sinkings of French, Italian, American or other vessels than British.

Heewoman Farling amid the applause and jeers of hundreds. No charge was immediately placed against her. Mrs. Richardson, who virtually all the work of tearing down the four banners. While several movie operators commended a negro's passing back to screen the waving of banner fragments by the crowd, four suffrage recruits marched from their headquarters with four new yellow banners. One is Belligerent. These recruits were extremely belligerent. The leader, a small woman, saw several men with their backs toward her, in her path. She deliberately marched into one, knocking him over. Police Captain Hartley refused to let the man take revenge on the woman's banner. Another man demanded to know if the woman had a permit to parade. "I'll show you," retorted Hartley, and he hustled the man to the street. Just before the second attack of the day on the banners Senator J. Hamilton Lewis stopped to tell Miss Hunkins he was "strong for woman suffrage" but that he doesn't believe the women should go at it just that way. Police inspectors wandered pleasantly through the growing crowd saying "please, gentlemen, move on. You'll find a recruiting station just a block away. After all, anyone can pull down a banner, but it takes a man to shoulder a musket." Mrs. Richardson is a medium sized woman with fiery red hair. Her son

ALKAHI MAKES SOAP BAD FOR WASHING HAIR
Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle. The best thing to use is just plain multifid coconut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Cigarette Causes Arrest of Deserter
Portland, Ore., June 21.—Sol Blapp, alias Jack Gibbon, here today faces the charge of deserting from the navy in time of war, punishable by death. Blapp's entire trouble can be traced to one indiscretion. He blew cigarette smoke into the face of a policeman. The officer demanded Blapp's registration card. "Not old enough," replied Blapp. "Didn't have to register." The policeman then arrested Blapp for violating a state law prohibiting minors from smoking. Later investigation showed that Blapp deserted from the cruiser New Orleans and was turned over to the federal authorities today. He is not of age.

accompanied her. She said she was "horn in Missouri and you have to show me those women are real patriots." Another son is in the officers' training camp at Fort Myer. President Wilson was in his study when the riot started and during the excitement went from his study to luncheon. The noise from the crowd outside was distinctly audible in the White House. The First Incident. Washington, June 21.—Amid the cheers of a small crowd, a banner denouncing the president and Ellis Root placed at the northeast gate of the White House today by suffragettes, was ripped down by two men five minutes after it appeared. The sign, held by Miss Catharine Moree, Boston, and Miss Lucy Burns, Brooklyn, was identical in wording with the one which was destroyed yesterday. Immediately the sign was placed at the gate, a crowd of about 50, jeering and boisterous, assembled. Suddenly a man, who refused to give his name, dashed forward and tipped away the lower part of the sign. The upper portion was next ripped off by George B. Montgomery, Richland, Va., who participated in the small riot yesterday. The pickets had difficulty in keeping a grip on the framework as Montgomery tugged and pulled at it. The remnants were immediately seized by police who made no attempt to interfere with the destruction of the banner. After the last of the sign had gone the pickets surrendered. The framework to other suffragists, who had stood quietly looking on and it was taken back to headquarters. The pickets then unfurled another banner, proclaiming "Democracy should begin at home." The near militant branch of suffragists evidently have procured a big reserve supply of denunciatory banners for it was announced another would be placed on view at 12:30. That is the hour when lunch crowds from scores of nearby offices are thickest. Police Superintendent Pullman is prepared to send additional police to the scene.
