PROPOSE CHARTER

Col. Hofer strongly advocated majority rule, and asked the people to consider well before they gave the city arbitrary powers which would make it possible to confiscate a home without what he called their "Day in Court." He asserted that paying interests in Portland were behind the advocates of the amendments, and that all special interests in the city were also for the amendments.

He declared that, in his opinion, in the residence districts, owners of the residences should not be made to pay for paving by a system of assessing the abutting property for the full amount of the pavement.

Want a Square Deal.

Attorney William H. Trindle, in supporting the measures, said in part: "I believe that the people of North Salem stand for a square deal and want one. The people in every part of the city now pay, in general taxes, for the delinquencies of a few. At present, one-tenth of the general property tax of Salem goes to pay for interest on delinquent street assessments alone."

"In answering Col. Hofer's statement that the delinquents are poor people, I want to emphasize the fact that until these cases were carried to the courts about two years ago, only the rich men were delinquent, but that when things are in such an unsettled condition, as they are today, the other people who owe assessments are just sitting still and holding back from paying the assessments to see what is to be done."

Mr. Trindle took up the ordinance, reading a portion of the re-assessment amendment to more firmly fix his points upon the minds of his hearers. He first pointed out the fact that while the amendment adopts the form of the state and county lien law, yet it attaches but legal interest to the delinquents, and does not add a penalty of 10 per cent or a further interest rate of 15 per cent until collected, as the opponents of the amendment declared would be the case. Mr. Trindle said that according to the amendment, no attorney fees could be assessed against the delinquent, as the opposition held would happen.

He said that that provision was made in the amendment for the correct assessment of the Oaks addition, and that the cry about the initiation of the amendment due to the lack of right to remonstrate was entirely unnecessary for the very good reason that the amendment specifically said that instead of the former two-thirds needed to make a remonstrance effective only a bare majority, 51 per cent, will be necessary. Therefore, that right of remonstrance and majority rule which Col. Hofer so strongly advocated was not taken away or violated in any way.

Grant Corby, as usual, was one of the main opponents to the amendments and in his talk, which followed that of Mr. Trindle, he brought out much of the worthy argument.

He declared that the difficult system of collecting liens had never been tried, and that therefore, the advocates of the amendments did not know whether it would work or not. He said that under the present system, over a million dollars had been paid on assessments. He derided the prophecies of the other side, and said that, so far, none of them had come true. He declared that the recent action of the supreme court amounted to but little, and that the only reason why the motion to recall the mandate was made was that it was hurting the cause for the advocates of the amendments.

Attorney Winslow was the next speaker for the amendments, and with chalk and eraser graphically illustrated to his audience the exact situation in the South Twelfth street case. He emphasized the fact that the reason for the recalling of the mandate yesterday was that it contained statements which were not in the opinions signed by the supreme judges. He quoted the opinion which was handed down, to the effect that the case was decided wholly upon the fact that technically the notice was not printed for the required length of time.

Inman Fears Confiscation.

He declared that he wanted paving in front of his home, but that as long as the present system prevailed he knew he would never get it. He said he considered the pavement in front of his property of more value to himself than to any one else, and that he was willing to pay for it if it was laid.

At the conclusion of Mr. Winslow's remarks, Attorney Inman gave a strong talk in opposition to the measures, stating that if the amendments passed there would be no resources in law whereby the common person might prevent his home being confiscated, provided that he was delinquent in his assessment payments. He said that even if a man did object, the city would have the power to over-ride all opposition and re-assess the property. He declared that as a resident of Salem, owning a home here, he was absolutely opposed to the amendments.

Mr. Trindle closed the debate for the proponents of the amendments by summarizing some arguments and giving some facts relative to statements made by the opposition. He left the conclusions to be drawn by the people, merely bringing up the points for their consideration.

About 100 listened to the arguments, among them a large number of ladies, and these took a very great interest in the debate. A meeting will be held in the Leslie M. E. church Friday night to further discuss the question.

Southern Pacific's Business in State Shows Big Increase

Operating revenues of the Southern Pacific company for 1916 amounted to $121,481,980, which is an increase of $13,256,042 over the revenues of 1915, according to the company's annual report filed with the Oregon public service commission.

Operating expenses for 1916 were $76,249,254, which is an increase of $9,238,795 over 1915. This shows that while the company's revenues increased over $13,000,000, its operating expenses increased only a little more than $9,000,000.

as wreckage and oil testify; others probably perished, too. The destroyers and transports were unscathed.

Leak in Departments

From them on they were conveyed safely and unmolested, with the added aid of French destroyers, to their French destination.

The spy angle in this instance is the most serious yet encountered, though there was apparent proof that the Germans had advance information of the going of the American patrol to Europe.

But as officials here saw it today, the really dangerous part of the situation must have come before publication, inasmuch as the submarines lurked on a path they had not heretofore used and were in such force as to show they had prepared well in advance.

Officials are positive that an almost constant flow of information reaches Berlin direct from this nation, as evidenced by the fact that allied shipments carefully secreted are published in Berlin papers.

Two possible avenues of communication are open—first, secret wireless messages; second, embassies which may be friendly to Germany, who have access to cables and use of code.

Independence Day and Miners Parade May End the Strike

Bisbee, Ariz., July 4.—The I. W. W. influenced miners' strike here is believed to have been ended today as the result of a remarkable Independence Day patriotic demonstration, participated in by over 4000 miners.

The miners paraded the main streets, waving American flags and shouting their loyalty to the United States. Non-striking miners of the Calumet and Arizona mine headed the procession. Permission to march in the parade was refused strikers by the celebration committee.

The only violence was the result of the refusal of one miner to uncover as the flag passed. A bystander knocked him down, and a threatening crowd was driven off by officers, who hurried the injured man into the police station. Later he kissed the flag and was permitted to leave without further harm.

As a result of the overwhelming demonstration of the real patriotic sentiment of the majority of the miners, most of the strikers are expected to return to work tomorrow, when the mines re-open.

"Along the Road to Tokyo"

THE Ongawa Company in "Along the Road to Tokyo" present at Chautauqua a kaleidoscopic view of old Japan. The work of these Japanese artists has the finesse of animated art prints, quaintly knit together in a love story fantasy, accompanied by the lullaby croons and chants of the quaint native music, of Geisha girl and butterfly dances. The play is in characteristic musical setting, given with costuming and scenery of special importation. Mr. Ongawa is the descendant of the famous Samurais of Japan.

by the advanced students of William Wallace Graham.

Miss Genevieve Campbell of Portland is visiting at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. James E. Godfrey. Miss Campbell came Sunday and will be here for about a month.

To welcome Rev. P. H. Neff and family in their new pastorate at the Englewood United Brethren church, a reception will be given by the ladies aid society, Friday evening in the basement of the church.

All members and friends of the church are cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. F. A. Stein and two sons, Robert and Edwin, of Miles City, Montana, are passing the summer in Salem as the guests of Mrs. C. E. Brown on 490 North Twenty-first street.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Mickel and children have gone to Albany for the days festivities and are the guest of the former's mother, Mrs. G. A. Mickel.

Several days ago little Elaine Steingrube celebrated her eighth birthday, when she entertained some of her friends with a matinee party at the Oregon theatre, with refreshments at the Spa.

Her mother, Mrs. A. C. Steingrube, and Mrs. C. M. Inman chaperoned the young folks who included Roseland Rodgers, Zerelda Rodgers, Alice Windland, Howard Steingrube, athlete Rodgers and Elaine Steingrube.

AUTHORITIES TRY

pedge to carry out its scheme. The death of Detective Wodley, who was wounded by a mob of blacks that killed Coppedge early Monday morning, came near starting a fresh riot last night but soldiers were too numerous and it was known that they had instructions to shoot to kill.

Sightseers, who flocked through the ruined district yesterday, despite the efforts of the police to keep them out, had already begun to storm the city at an early hour today. They crossed the river in boats and came in by obscure paths when passage of bridges and highways to all not holding police passes, was blocked.

Searching for Bodies.

Nearly all the black population had left the city today—most of them carrying their belongings in bags. Many of them had gone south and thousands were being cared for in St. Louis. Small bands guarded by militia flocked across the municipal bridge all yesterday afternoon some holding spirits returned under militia guard to search in the ruins of their homes for bodies of missing relatives and every now and then charred snuggles in the ashes revealed trinkets or other indication that negroes had been incinerated there.

There was talk of calling a special federal grand jury to conduct an investigation at once, but this had not been definitely decided. It was admitted that prosecutions would be difficult on account of the thousands of persons involved in a strong current of public sympathy with the mob members under arrest.

Cases of smallpox discovered among refugees yesterday have been isolated and there is little danger of an epidemic, authorities declared. They were taking special care to fumigate all quarters occupied by the negroes, however.

Most of the hundreds of mobsmen arrested Monday night and yesterday had been released on small bonds or fined.
