other time."

Only once did the colonel mention his great disappointment, the failure of President Wilson to take advantage of his offer to raise four divisions of volunteers. This was in connection with his remarks about weeding German-Americans out of Red Cross units, when he said:

"The selfishness and short sighted ness of these men were due to the fact that the lenders of the professional German-Americans' movement sought to subordinate the actions of the country of which they were nominally citizens, the United States, to the needs of the country for which they really eared, Germany.

Mast Be for or Against

"Now we are at open war with Ger-

Americans out of Red Cross units, when he said:

"If I had been permitted to raise the four divisions of troops for service abroad which congress gave me per mission to raise, among the regular of fivers whom I would have recommended for command of the divisions and brigades would have been General Kuhn and Colonel Brandholtz; and I would have counted myself happy to have served under either."
