

SOCIETY and CLUBS

By ALBIE THOMPSON

SOCIETY and devotees flocked to the Salem tennis club courts again today to attend the final matches of the annual tennis tournament.

It was another gala day and the attractive grounds were dotted with men and women gaily attired in bright colored sports clothes.

Tea tables decked with vivid-hued flowers were arranged about the grounds for the refreshments, and here the spectators and players revelled in the refreshing beverages, which were served each afternoon by a group of matrons and maids.

At these annual gatherings of the tennis club from all over the coast, there always is a delightful side play of games, that gives the flavor of real fun, after the days work on the courts is over.

The usual dinners, picnics, dances and other informal affairs rounded out the week of festivity, and on Friday night the club honored the visiting players with a picnic at Spang's landing, followed by a dance at the Hotel Marion.

Now that the frivolity is over society will turn its attention to the summer resorts, and the social ranks will be amply depleted for some weeks to come.

On the opening day of the tournament the matrons asked to preside over the refreshments were: Mrs. R. E. Lee Steiner, Mrs. Prince W. Byrd, Mrs. L. F. Griffith, Mrs. Charles Bates and Mrs. D. B. Ross.

Miss Fleming has chosen pink for the color scheme of the wedding and the house will be decked with quantities of Dorothy Perkins roses, sweet peas and other pinkish blossoms.

The bride who is a petite brunette will wear a charming gown of cream chiffon cloth over taffeta with a long tulle veil. Her bouquet will be a shower of Cecil Brunner roses and sweet peas.

Mrs. Julia Bross Pennell will sing "At Dawning" and the wedding march will be played by Mrs. Hershel Powers, one of the bride's close friends.
