A California traveler this morning disregarded a barricade across South Commercial street that was being paved and drove his car on the newly-laid pavement with the result that it will require several hours work to repair the damage. Councilman Elliott saw the incident and brought the offender to the police station. After being given a lecture on observing the significance of a barricade, and that it was placed in the street for the purpose of keeping travelers out, he was allowed to go on promise of not doing it again.

Splendid upright mahogany piano just traded in will be sold at exact cost. This instrument is in perfect condition, excepting that the case is checked, but it has a magnificent tone and you will be surprised at the very low price and easy terms. See Mr. Sawyer at E. L. Stiff & Son's, 448 Court.

O. E. Franke, who recently returned from a trip along the coast told this morning of some of his experiences during his travels. He motored over in a Ford, and says the roads are in good shape. He first took in the Trask river, where he caught some 75 pounds of trout. He went from there along the beaches to Netarts Bay, where he spent three days digging clams. He said there were seven different species of that mollusk in those waters, and they were so plentiful that it was the work of but a half hour or so to fill a gummy sack full. Before he returned to Salem he spent two days at Bayview and Lake Lyle. Hay in the Tillamook country is something wonderful, stated Mr. Franke, and there is a bumper crop. Business is flourishing in that section.

Robert Paulus, of the Salem Fruit Union, stated this morning that the only things very much needed here were rain and loganberry pickers. Owing to the drought the berry crop will be somewhat short. The majority of pickers sent from Portland to Salem never reach this city, owing to the fact that the growers along the river and railroad stop them and take them to their own yards.

An occasional visit to the service station may save your battery an enforced stay there. Willard Service, 418 Court.
