Three of the leading grocery stores were paying 50 cents each and 52 cents in trade. If any store was paying more, it was done possibly to secure the business, which might be lutely controlled by Portland prices. There is generally a margin of two cents between Portland and Salem. Then Portland pays 50 cents, Salem pays 50 cents, Many who have tried shipping to Portland and had some experience with those commission houses, find the Salem quotations are right But regardless of what is quoted, it is Portland that controls the Salem price.
