Little Talks on Thrift

By S. W. STRAUS President American Society for Thrift

Out in the sea, there exists a supply of food such as mink and sperm oil and the lessened use of whale bone the industry has become almost extinct. But with the demand for whale meat, it can be revived quickly and in this instance alone an almost limitless amount of food can be laid at the door of mankind.

Experiments by the Bureau of Fisheries also have shown that most species of the shark are good food. Of course some members of the family are scavengers, man eaters, etc., but most members of the shark tribe are good to eat and the flesh is clean and tasty.

In our inland streams and lakes there is a fish called the carp which is generally looked upon as a pest. But here lies one of our greatest sources of food supply. There were 43,000,000 pounds of carp marketed in the United States in one year according to the latest census. The waters of our streams are filled with this fish today. It is a source of food that should be utilized. All one needs is to know how to cook the carp properly. There is a long list of fish that have not hitherto been regarded as food fish, but which experiments have shown are eminently fit for human consumption.

Among these are sharks, bowfin, toadfish, squids, porpoise, skates, grayfish, sablesfish, burbot, lamprey, cels and menhaden.

While we are conserving our supplies of wheat, fat, meat and sugar, steps should be taken adequately to utilize this endless supply of food.

In all the talk one hears about thrift and food conservation, one hears far too little about the fish and its uses. In eating fish we can well feel that we are taking food from nobody's mouth, for there seems enough for the whole world.

SOCIALISTS WANT PEACE Amsterdam, Nov. 16.—German independent socialists have asked the president of the Reichstag to convene an extraordinary session of that body for discussion of a peace offer received from Nicholas Lenin, the Russian Bolshevik leader. Dismissals from Berlin revealing the petition did not specify under what circumstances Lenin had made an offer of peace.

NEARING JERUSALEM London, Nov. 17.—How close the British have approached to Jerusalem was revealed by General F. B. Maurer, director of operations, in an interview with the United Press. On Monday, he said, General Allenby drove the Turks back for seven miles to a position along the Kedron covering Joppa and the railway junction to Jerusalem itself. "One of our cavalry groups," he added, "took 1100 prisoners."
