

Thirty Years Experience with This Kidney Medicine

Judging from the excellent reports received from the users of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root it is a remedy of exceptional value and worthy of a thorough trial in any case of kidney, liver or bladder trouble. I have included it among my articles for sale for the past thirty years and I cannot recall a single case where it failed to do all that is claimed for it.

Very truly yours, FRANK E. GOETTER, Druggist and Chemist, December 7th, 1916, Colville, Wash.

Send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample size bottle. It will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, send me mention the Salem Daily Capital Journal. Medium and large size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

Certificate To Teach Has Been Revoked

The certificate to teach of Miss Lilian M. Schassen has been revoked by J. A. Churchill, superintendent of public instruction, because she resigned her position in a rural school near Kent, in Sherman county, without the consent of the school board.

Since the enactment of a law by the 1917 legislature, a teacher cannot resign from her contract to teach within 30 days of the opening of school or during the school year without the consent of the school board. If she does and the board prefers charges against her it is the duty of the superintendent of public instruction to cancel her teaching certificate, and she will not be eligible to obtain another certificate for a year.

Prior to the enactment of this law a teacher could resign at any time by giving 30 days notice.

Sullivan Was Natural Boxer Discovered the Knockout

By H. C. Hamilton (Copyright, 1918, by United Press) CHAPTER II

There entered the world on October 15, 1888, in the Roxbury section of Boston, Mass., a youngster who was just like every other youngster. His parents were Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sullivan, and they named the addition to their family John L. And, just as if christenings were the sum total of names, the youth grew to manhood with just his first name and the middle initial enough to designate him. John L., he was then, and John L., he was up to the time of his death.

John L. spent a humble boyhood. His parents came from Ireland to make their fortunes in America. They didn't get any wealth, so it was up to John when he grew old enough, to earn his own living.

Battles in School Days Wild and carefree, full of energy and deviltry, this youngster simply swept over the early stages of life. He bubbled over with enthusiasm over being alive. He went swiftly from one occupation to another after he discarded his school-books. And through it all there stuck out his love of enjoyment, infatuation for athletics, and regard for fair play.

Early days for John L. Sullivan at school were filled with rough-and-tumble fights among his fellows—just as every boy's life is filled with similar things. But his, unlike most boys' fights, led on and on through more fights. This led to the days of the old gladiators kept on fighting because he couldn't help it. He liked to fight.

John was just a stripling when he hired himself out as a tow-boy, driving mules along the path, with a heavy canal boat swishing along behind. The life, however, was too dull. He wanted more action. And it was this craving that drew him strongly and surely into the public eye as the greatest pugilist who ever drew on a glove.

Was Boston's Strong Man He quit his jobs one after the other in rapid succession. He became a tin-smith's helper, a plumber's helper, and finally a plumber. His longest job stayed with him while he was workman at the old King Locomotive Works in Boston, where his prodigious strength first became noticed. He pushed the box cars around there.

The father of Boston's Strong Boy was conferred on him before he was 18 years old. He was immensely proud of it, and as he became more and more noticeable, and as his feats as an athlete became more talked of, he experienced a craving to become a pugilist.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, liquid uric acid from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Floods Are Checked by Colder Weather

Warren, Pa., Feb. 21.—Lower temperature today checked the floods in the Allegheny river, but before it came back was raised above the river's course. Corydon, Pa., was partly wrecked, the business section being damaged to the extent of $100,000 by ice when the jam broke. At Gilson a locomotive broke down a trestle that had been weakened by the water and Engineer P. F. Mullen of Sheffield was drowned. W. S. Buzzard of Sheffield, fireman, was rescued.

The passengers aboard the train escaped through the fact that the train was running slowly and none of the coaches was derailed.

River Stationary. Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 21.—The Allegheny river was receding at noon today at the rate of several inches an hour, and before night was expected to drop below the 22 foot mark on the Point Bridge gauge. The high water mark in the present flood was 27.3 feet.

The northside lines of the Pittsburgh and Western and the Baltimore and Ohio railroads were under water. Transportation on these lines was tied up.

LIQUOR FOR SOLDIERS.

New York, Feb. 21.—Sailors and soldiers in uniform may accept liquor in the homes of friends if they are bona fide guests therein, or in their homes, according to a ruling here by the United States district attorney. The ruling was based on an interpretation from the department of justice a Washington.

Allegheny River Reaches Flood Stage

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 21.—Heavy damage to railroad property and a possibly serious transportation tieup on certain lines was looked for early today when the Allegheny river overflowed. At 8 o'clock this morning the low sections of the north side were flooded. The river was still rising at that hour. The 27 foot stage had been passed and a gauge of not less than 25 feet was looked for. Many homes were partially submerged. The tracks of the Pittsburgh and Western and B. and O. railroads were under water.

Congressman Nelson's Son Subject to Draft

Madison, Wis., Feb. 21.—Notice was mailed today by the Madison exemption board to Hyron C. Nelson, son of Congressman John M. Nelson, announcing him subject to call. Nelson is in the draft, class one, his claims for exemption on grounds of a dependent bride and agricultural occupation having been disallowed. His alleged attempts to evade the draft brought a speech from Congressman Nelson in the house, defending his son.

Montana Legislature Sits As Trial Court

Helena, Mont., Feb. 21.—The special session of the Montana legislature today became a tribunal of justice, and is examining witnesses regarding the impeachment charges filed against District Judge Crumm of Forsythe. Adjournment of the special session is delayed by the proceedings.

Following the introduction of 100 affidavits charging Crumm with seditious utterances and beliefs, several assemblymen caused the affidavits to be annulled. Sitting as a jury, the house will hear evidence for and against Crumm today.

MANY BALLPLAYERS ARE HOLDING OUT

Only Thirty Per Cent of Last Year's Players Have So Far Signed Contracts

By H. C. Hamilton (United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Feb. 21.—The gang of holdouts now bringing the sweat out in large lumps on the brows of major league magnates is not the result of a concerted plan by the Baseball Players Fraternity to make the magnates come through with more money. At least it isn't so far as David L. Fultz knows and Dave, being the holdover president of the fraternity, claims he would know if such was the case.

But the holdout fever is epidemic and rampaging through the payrolls of every major league club in the country. As a matter of fact there are very few which have signed enough men to even claim the rudiments of a baseball team. Even the New York Giants, a club which declares it has most of its players signed, must own up to lack of contracts from George Burns, Jim Thorpe, Dave Robertson, Fred Schupp, Pol Perritt, and Slim Sallee, an outfielder and a pitching staff. Of course it is possible that some other president or secretary, or something has taken over the duty of Fultz in the players fraternity and has told the boys to spurn their contracts, but Fultz says nay. He believes the athletes are only asserting their rights.

Anyway, no matter what the cause it is a fact that less than 30 per cent of last year's ball players and the new spring crop have consented to affix their signatures to the papers. It is a fact that the war can't be blamed for this. No, sir! Baseball players who can blame the wars are not doing it. They're glad of the fact that they have joined the army or the navy. Those who are holding out merely state they want more money or are "going to quit the game."
