Investigate Reports of Ground Glass in Eatables

New York, April 4.—A thorough investigation of numerous reports of the finding of glass in bread, candies and other edibles, is being conducted today in the Brooklyn district by the department of justice.

Edward Walker, a confectioner and his clerks, Henry Williams, both unaturalized Germans, are being held by government authorities. No charge has been preferred against them and government officials state that they are being detained merely as alien enemies.

Under orders of the federal food board all alien enemies employed by Brooklyn bakeries are to be discharged. The police department has received complaints daily of the finding of glass in edibles but to date no fatalities have resulted.

Mrs. Donald Wilson, wife of a Long Island railroad official today, reported to the district attorney of Nassau county that ground glass had been found in bread purchased for her home last night.

Government investigation of the finding of glass in edibles purchased on the Pacific coast disclosed the fact that the supposed glass was sugar crystals, it was declared here today.

Eugene, Or., April 4.—Elmer D. Paine, former baseball player, University of Oregon, and a member of one of the oldest and wealthiest families in this section, was out on $2500 bond today following his indictment with two others on an arson charge.

The indictment alleges Paine with Jesse Fox and Harry Martin burned a Coburg warehouse belonging to the Eugene Mill and Elevator company, of which Paine is a member. The warehouse contained potatoes belonging to Fox. The warehouse and contents were heavily insured.

A second indictment charges Fox and Martin with a second, similar offense.

SEATTLE INSPECTOR UNDER ACCUSATION

Said to Have Been Captain of Steamer Furnishing Coal to German Cruiser

San Francisco, April 4.—Captain K. Z. Paulson, government inspector of hulls and boilers at Seattle, was severely grilled on the witness stand here today by United States District Attorney Preston during the Hindu revolt plot trial.

Paulson was captain of the steamer Mazatlan, which is alleged by the government to have furnished coal to the German cruiser Leipzig when she was roving the Pacific early in the war.

Unrevealed chapters of the story of the Mazatlan and the Leipzig were brought out during Preston's questioning of Captain Paulson.

Preston declared he intended to prove that a cook was taken aboard the Mazatlan who really was a wireless operator, and this "cook" rigged up a wireless outfit and sent messages to the Leipzig arranging for a meeting in Mexican waters; that when the Leipzig was spotted, a small boat took the "cook" to the German cruiser.

Paulson denied knowledge of the Mazatlan's transactions with the Leipzig but admitted that he was skipper of the Mazatlan. Asked if he had been a paid agent of the German government, Paulson said:

"Not that I know of. I was in the pay of Jobson."

(Jobson owned the Mazatlan.)

Paulson said he knew nothing of the coaling of the Leipzig and did not know that a wireless outfit had been rigged on his ship. He said his ship met the Leipzig in Mexican waters and two cases of food were transferred to the warship.

"Didn't you know that these cases contained important documents and a wireless outfit?" asked Preston. "Do you mean to tell me the chief officer of a ship doesn't know what is going on on his own vessel?"

Paulson said he must have been below when such transactions occurred if they did.

Preston then exhibited to Paulson a photograph showing a small boat going from the Mazatlan to the Leipzig and asked Captain Paulson if he had ever witnessed such a scene.

"It was so long ago that I have forgotten," said Paulson.

O'Mara, et al, an interlocutory decree appointing commissioners to appraise curtesy rights was given and in the case of Lena Minton, et al versus W. J. Gehlen, et al, a decree was entered correcting a clerical error in the final decree of partition.

Deschutes County Legality Contested

An appeal, in which the legality of the organization of Deschutes county is contested, has been set ahead for hearing by the supreme court, and will be argued on April 17th. possible to secure a lien on government lands for reclamation work, and this will now be operative in the state. A tract of land in the Suttle Lake district is to receive the first benefit of this adjustment.

The project approved by the government calls for the irrigation of 29,000 acres of government land, and 17,000 acres of private land. This will be accomplished at a cost of approximately $79 an acre. The water is to be secured by means of two dams on Jordan Creek, in Malheur county.

The plan for co-operative surveys was also approved, and it was so arranged that the returns from these will be used in further research work, in order that when the war is ended, the state and government will have the necessary information to permit them to go ahead with important reclamation projects.

The matter of the adjustment of claims, in which government land is involved, was also settled. Under the recently enacted Smith bill, it will be election which decided the partition of Crook county, that 35 per cent of the remaining voters in Crook county did not vote, and that illegal and incorrect returns were sent in by the county clerk of Crook county to the secretary of state.

In the respondent's brief, it is admitted that in the election, certain errors were made because of the necessary dividing of a certain precinct when the new county was set off. This was admitted at the time, and a friendly suit to compel the county clerk to correct the errors was started in the circuit court, but not carried to the supreme court. This resulted, it is claimed, in a correction of the error. It is further alleged that the county was legally created by a proclamation of the governor, and has a duly selected county organization, and for that reason the present action should have been taken in the circuit court for Deschutes county, and that the Crook county court has no jurisdiction. The fact that Josephine county is made a party to the suit is advanced as an stoppage of the plaintiff's suit.
