

MACCABEES LISTEN TO SPLENDID LECTURE

Commander Markey Visits Lodge Here and Talks of War and Duty

Daniel P. Markey, supreme commander of the Maccabees delivered a stirring patriotic address to those who were so fortunate as to attend the open meeting of the Maccabees held last evening in the Derby building.

"I want to see this war go on until the beast of Europe is caged," declared Mr. Markey. "America was the first country to declare that this war was a war to the finish. I am in favor of this war not only on account of the principles involved, but because I want to see it kept 3,000 miles away from our homes."

The speaker seemed rather embarrassed that he did not see an American flag in the lodge room. "If there is anything that should be displayed in a Maccabee hut, it is the American flag. This hall and every business house should be decorated with American flags." Ships and more ships, combined with the manhood of the nation will let the Kaiser know he cannot pass, declared the speaker.

Mr. Markey is also an insurance expert and so recognized in all fraternal circles. He said that out of every 100 that go to war, statistics show that 90 will return and that 90 will go through the ordeal in good physical condition.

He was glad to say that the Maccabees were taking care of all their fraternal insurance, paying so far out of the general relief fund. A patriotic fund had been created by the levy of $1 per capita, to be used if necessary.

The first man who lost his life in the navy was a Maccabee, he said, and the $1000 insurance was paid three days after receiving notice of his death. He felt assured that fraternal insurance would grow, since the government had endorsed insurance and had given returning soldiers the privilege of transferring their policies to any company after their return.

years ago, when as he said, he had a wife and two children and was teaching school in northern Michigan at $30 a month. At that time the lodge numbered 60 tents with 1000 members. Now there are 5,400 tents, the membership is 300,000 and the lodge has assets of $22,000,000.

CIVILIAN HEAD OF DEPARTMENT IS BEING URGED

Another Schwab Needed To Inject Some Pep Into Bureau Affairs

By Carl D. Groat (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, May 8.—Appointment of a civilian head of the ordnance department is being strongly urged in many quarters.

Coincident with a thorough investigation Secretary Baker is making into the ordnance situation, the demand for "a Schwab" to "pep up" ordnance production is increasing.

General Williams, rated high as an ordnance expert, has taken hold of the department, while General Wheeler, former head, is now in Europe. The situation confronting Williams is admittedly none too good.

Those urging appointment of a civilian chief say there is a big function for the military man in the ordnance situation, but that it lies in distribution to the forces in the field rather than in getting vast production quickly and efficiently.

Virtually every phase of ordnance production aside from machine guns and rifles and some forms of ammunition is a source of worry to men directly connected with the task.

At present it is difficult to chart in definite figures just where the ordnance situation stands. Secretary Baker confesses he doesn't know where the machine gun matter stands. The policy of silence covering many phases of war work have kept ordnance—like airplanes—from public notice most of the time until now when reorganization and investigation are becoming the popular watchwords.

THE EFFICIENT WOMAN

The foundation of efficiency lies in a robust, healthy constitution. When ill, weak and suffering from dragging down pains, inflammatory and ulcerated conditions or displacement with consequent backache, headaches, nervousness and "the blues," no woman can be efficient or hardly a fit companion to live with. If every woman in this condition would only give that most successful of all root and herb remedies, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial, she would soon be restored to health and reach the goal of her ambition for personal efficiency.

JUDGE LANDIS SCORES

William Haywood, chief defendant, in answer to the judge's query, said the "bulletin" formerly was the "Industrial Worker," of Spokane, and might be called an I. W. W. organ. H. L. Varney, whose name was mentioned as author of the article which stung Judge Landis, is a St. Louis newspaperman, Haywood said.

The matter to which the judge took exception said the I. W. W. knew it wouldn't receive justice and as a final warning asserted that there were 200,000 persons in the organization.

George F. Vanderveer, chief counsel for the defense, spiritedly scolded the judge. "It was a bonehead trick," he told the defendants.

A hint that a government will seek to prove the I. W. W. received outside, possibly foreign support, was given when attorneys asked an accountant who analyzed the I. W. W. books if the "receipts from other sources" included German or Austrian donations.

What happened to the quarter of a million dollars paid in the I. W. W. treasury in six months after America declared war will constitute one of the government's main lines of inquiry.

Overriding protests from attorneys for the 112 I. W. W. leaders on trial, Judge Landis permitted an accountant to testify as to receipts of the organization.

William Haywood, secretary and executive head of the I. W. W. claimed he received a salary of $90 a month. Other workers professed modest salaries.

L. W. W. Organization Had Plenty of Money

Chicago, May 8.—The I. W. W. was no poverty stricken organization according to F. W. Bailey, Minneapolis accountant, who analyzed books seized in William Haywood's offices. His testimony today in the trial of 112 I. W. W. charged with sedition showed the organization collected $271,217 from all sources between April and August, 1917.

The receipts showed decided increases during the harvest months, when many members were at work in the fields. In round numbers the income was: Initiations $57,712; dues, $74,500; other sources $137,000.

PROGERMAN'S HAIR CUT

San Rafael, Cal., May 8.—Henry Zang, a native of Switzerland, was found late last night tied to a tree in the court house yard, and with his hair clipped in the form of a cross.

He said 25 masked night riders had clipped his hair and threatened him with more serious injury if he made any more pro-German remarks. Zang had told the local draft board his sympathies were with Germany.

SOCIALISTS ARE SENSIBLE

Chicago, May 8.—The national executive committee of the socialist party at a meeting here today rejected requests from local organizations for a referendum on the war. It set August 10 as a date for a meeting here of state secretaries and national party officials to state anew the position of American socialists. A referendum was held to be indivisible in view of the strict provisions of the espionage and sedition acts.
