SOCIETY

By CAROL E. DIBBLE

A fairland of light and color, peopled with myriad bewitching little figures, clad in a galaxy of gay costumes, from the plaid kilt of the diminutive Scottish highlander to the demure garb of the Red Cross lassie, will welcome a throng of relatives and friends, who attend the opening performance of the children's dance recital tomorrow night at the Opera House. This pageant of national and military dances, historical and court scenes, interspersed with lively choruses, will feature a number of the advanced pupils in the dancing classes of Mrs. Ralph White, and will take the form of a May Festival, wherein a veritable May Queen will be crowned in the first act.

The proceeds will be devoted to a patriotic cause and local society is eagerly anticipating another opportunity of assisting relief activities under so entertaining a guise as the program gives liberal promise of being.

Several box parties are being planned for the occasion among the patronesses and their friends, who are sponsoring the event. The sale of reserved seats will begin at nine o'clock tomorrow morning at the box office of the opera house.

The Salem Woman's club will hold its last meeting of the year Saturday afternoon at two thirty, at the club rooms in the auditorium of the Commercial club. The annual election of officers will take place and reports from the president, and committees, not yet having reported, will be heard. The necessarily long business session will preclude the customary program.

Mrs. W. H. Marvin of Walla Walla, Washington, has returned home after a visit of several weeks in Salem with her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Marvin, at their home, 725 North Church street.

Mr. Marvin came down from Walla Walla for the week end, accompanying his wife on her return. Mrs. Marvin was the motif of several delightful social attentions during her stay in Salem.

State House News

At Brney General Brown had another tangle to straighten out today, it being a matter coming from Curry county sent by Colyer H. Buffington, district attorney. It seems some one down in the southwest corner of the state, some republican or democrat who had a sudden change of heart wanted to change his registration and be classed with the other party. The registration books having closed the county clerk very properly refused to make the change. The attorney general holds the change can be made on election day, by the judges, the law providing for the same and also prescribing the methods.

Tuesday, May 28, the regular annual Bar examination will be held by the supreme court, the place probably being the hall of the lower house of the legislature. Usually there is a class of about 100 on this occasion, but this year it will probably from present indications not number more than 30. The falling off of two thirds is due to the war which has drawn heavily on the student class in law, and generally.

The Electric Service Auto company filed articles of incorporation this morning. Its place of business is Portland, capital stock $10,000 and object to deal in all kinds of power propelled vehicles and their parts and appliances.

Justices Moore and Barnett arrived home this morning after attending a session of the supreme court at Pendleton. The balance of the members are expected home today.

Stayton Organizes Home Guard Company

Stayton is going some. When it comes to raising a home guard company, in proportion to the size of the town, its record will be hard to beat. Last night there was organized in Stayton an Oregon militia company of home guards, with 87 members. L. S. Lambert was elected captain.

Tar and feather coats are not likely to become what you would call popular, but under certain circumstances they are stunningly effective, to say the least.

says, for which he paid $2 a night. By registering three days ahead, he managed to get into a good hotel. Some of the big ones are charging from $5 to $10 a day for a room and getting it. The sky seemed to be the limit.

Besides the thousands of army men in Washington, there are an extra 45,000 stenographers and typists now employed and Mr. Mangis found the business offices so filled up with clerks that it was often difficult to find the right man to discuss business.

Among the Salem boys he met was Captain Fred Rosenberg at Camp Merritt. Captain Rosenberg left for France about two weeks ago. Harry Hoxie is supply sergeant for Captain Rosenberg's company and is now over there with the company. Merrill Lampert was also at Camp Merritt, with orders to remain until his commission was forwarded to him. The aviation situation seemed to be somewhat mixed up. Mr. Mangis met a number of pilots on the train coming west, who were being sent into the service districts to do logging duty, simply because there was no airplanes. At points in the east, aviators were just standing around, marking time.

After one leaves Texas and heads towards Washington, one begins to realize what an enormous thing this war is, Mr. Mangis said. There is nothing but war and war talk and hundreds of troop trains are met on their way to the coast. All trains are filled with officers and passenger trains are side tracked as train load after train load of troops are being moved east.

At San Antonio, he saw 70 airplanes in the air at once. While the people in the far west are of course interested in the war Mr. Mangis found back east there was nothing else but war. All other subjects are almost forgotten. Incidentally, he saw the President and Mrs.

Wilson at a horse show and confirms the opinion of others that Mrs. Wilson is fully as good appearing as her pictures show and that she fully carries out the part as the "first lady in the land."
