ENGLISHMEN AMAZED AT AMERICA'S PLANS

Secretary Baker's Promises Are Already Nearing Their Fulfillment

Paris, May 17.—The United States has promised to have 1,500,000 fighting men in France by the end of 1918, says L'Homme Libre, Premier Clemenceau's newspaper.

These troops, it adds, must have their own organization and services, which will mean at least 2,000,000 specialists, workers, men in the quartermaster's department and others.

The newspaper says certain misunderstandings which had existed have been cleared up and that under no circumstances will allied workers or soldiers replace French workers in factories.

The presence of American workers on French soil will be in direct consequence of the presence of American fighters on the front.

American Plans Amaze

London, May 17.—American preparations on the western front are amazing in their immensity and plans are being made to care for 5,000,000 American troops, Harry B. Brittain, secretary of the British branch of the Pilgrims' club, told the Royal Colonial Institute's last night.

Indefinite Force Predicted
If the Germans do not give in, he added, the number of American troops will be increased to any amount necessary.

Baker Keeps Promise

Washington, May 17.—Announcement by Premier Clemenceau's newspaper that the United States has promised to have 1,500,000 fighting men in France by the end of this year seems to be a complete fulfillment of Secretary Baker's predictions of last January before the senate military committee.

Divisions on the western front where American units are engaged with the British and French, it became known today will fight under American commanders whenever American troops predominate.

The plan means that General Pershing will be placed in command of British and French units as well as his own Americans.

In addition to this, as illustrative of the unity of the command under which General Foch directs the American and allied armies, it was said officially that Foch commands Italian troops in Italy as fully as he does American, French and British troops in France and Belgium.

Believes Potatoes Will Bring Good Price the Coming Season

E. B. Barber of Portland who has been interested in the farming game for the past 20 years is firm in his belief that the farmer will make a good bet in raising plenty of potatoes this year. Mr. Barber figures that only 80 per cent of a crop will be put in this summer and that right on top of this, potato flour is coming into general use. All of which he figures should make a great demand for the home market.

Now when it comes to the time of planting potatoes, Mr. Barber says he has tried out very successfully the plan of not planting until after the last week of June. However, before the planting, the ground has been plowed four times and put into condition to hold moisture. Although the potatoes are not planted until July 1, the moisture in the ground during the two dry months will keep them growing and when the fall rains come, the potato will do its growing and be ready for the digging in November. It will be a potato firmer and more marketable than those planted early in the season. Mr. Barber also suggests that if farmers would plant cabbage and cauliflower along in the first week of July, the results will be most satisfactory. He has been advocating this late planting for a number of years and his ideas are respectfully submitted.

The commission was asked by the president to investigate to see whether there was need for a "new policy" perhaps government control—in connection with the food administration's efforts to bring about satisfactory co-operation between the government, cattle raisers and the packers.

The federal trade commission has been carrying on an exhaustive probe of the packing industry and is now preparing its report for congress. This report, it is understood, displays the packers in the light of a far reaching monopoly in control of many commodities and its tenor, if disclosures of Chief Investigator Francis J. Heney are any criterion, will be radically different from that submitted by the president's investigating committee.

WRITES MRS. WILSON ABOUT RECOVERY OF BODY OF HER SON

Body Found On Bottom of Capsized Boat—Girl Tells Story to Mother

The heroes who lost their lives when the Tuscania was torpedoed off the northeast coast of Ireland are many of them buried on the island of Islay, Scotland, where the bodies washed ashore. Mrs. F. J. Wilson of 1207 north 7th street, Salem, mother of Fred J. Wilson who lost his life when the boat was torpedoed, is in receipt of letters from his comrades and also Agnes Whyte of the lighthouse at Port Ellen on the Island of Islay, Scotland.

Corporal S. Brady of the 20th engineers writes: "The last time I saw your boy he was standing in line waiting for the boat that he was to go in to be lowered down so he could get into it. I also saw him that day Tuesday. He was feeling fine as we had just come in sight of land and expected to land soon. I was not lowered in the same boat with him as he was not in my squad. But from what I have heard, his boat was capsized after leaving the Tuscania, but he managed to get on the bottom. But it was so cold and rough that he was washed off just before they came to the rescue."

"Your boy is buried at Port Ellen, Islay, Scotland. I did not help bury him but I was there at the time. I will try and get some pictures and send you."

Agnes Whyte of the light house at Port Ellen, on the island of Islay, Scotland, also writes, Mrs. Wilson as follows:

"Though a stranger to you, may I express my sincere sympathy to you in the loss of your son. I have hesitated to write but as my brother and I

New Books Received at Public Library

The following books are added to the shelves at the library this week:

- "The United States and Pangermania," a continuation of "The Pangerman plot unmasked" in which the author brings up to date the evidence of the German plans. Cherdame.
- "Cavalry of the clouds," the personal experience of a captain in the aviation service.—Bott.
- "Expansion of Europe," a discussion of the problems of world politics which have and will affect modern history.—Ramsay Muir.
- "Modern fruit marketing," the business side of the fruit business growing, packing, marketing, methods of selling and cooperative selling agencies.—Brown.

had the sad task of bringing your son's body ashore, I might perhaps be able to give you more particulars than you might otherwise get. "We saw the life boat coming ashore on the morning following the torpedoing of the Tuscania and fortunately managed to pull her in and get the body off. Your son's was the only one there. Any others who may have been with him must have been washed overboard before we sighted the boat."

"So I am glad to be able to tell you that he was in no ways bruised or battered about by the rocks as was the fate of many of his comrades. "They are buried in a nice little spot near here and if you should like to have a photograph of the graves, I will be pleased to get one for you. Also at a later date, one of the little creek where we brought him in. As it is part of the coast line, I might not be allowed to send it now."

"His watch and pocket book, etc., will very probably be sent to you as these were taken charge of in all cases by the police. It was indeed little we were able to do. I know from experience that the smallest details are welcome concerning our loved ones when they are laid to rest in a strange land and far from their own people, and so I have ventured to write you. Anything we can do about the grave will be counted a privilege."
