The gas used in the projector attack was evidently phosgene, mixed with mustard gas. It affects the lungs, making breathing almost impossible. It was thrown over in two separate batches. The first crashed through the trees of the little wood and fell within a small area less than six hundred yards in diameter. The other fell on the front line trenches, where the boys saw the flash of the projectors in time to don their masks. The Germana also gassed the The gas used in the projector attack masks.
