Pioneers Will Hold Annual Picnic In Waldo Hills June 22

For more than twenty years the pioneers of this part of the valley have been in the habit of holding an annual reunion and picnic at some point in the Waldo Hills, and this year is to be no exception. Arrangements have been made for the annual meeting on the old John Hunt farm about sixteen miles east of Salem on Saturday, June 22. Walter Toose is to be the speaker of the day and a program of speaking and music has been arranged. Everybody is invited, pioneer and late comer alike. All that is required is to bring lunch baskets well filled and enjoy the occasion. There will be many a story told of the old days and many a friendship made half a century or more ago will be still more strongly cemented. If you have never attended one of these gatherings of the old time, you should make a special effort to attend it and get, although second handed, a glimpse of the old pioneer days.

Dutch Are Incensed at Submarine Outrage

Waalvelden, Holland, June 14.—A mob of Dutch fishermen attacked a hotel in which German airmen are interned, as the result of a submarine shelling the lifeboats of a Dutch lugger, which was sunk without warning Sunday. The Dutch were saved by the police. "White we were fishing Sunday a German submarine appeared and shelled us without warning," declared the captain of the lugger Helens. "The firing was kept up while we were lowering the boats and rowing away. A shell killed three of the crew and stove a high hole in a boat. We plugged the hole with clothing and kept it afloat. The submarine paid no attention to our plight." "The sailors made land after rowing for twelve hours. The sight of the bodies aroused the indignation of the fishermen, who tried to lynch the interned airmen in retaliation."

St. Louis, Mo., June 14.—Fielder Jones today announced his resignation as manager of the St. Louis American League team. He declared he intended quitting baseball. Jimmy Austin has been appointed manager temporarily.

BIG GERMAN DRIVE FAILS IN OBTAINING ITS OBJECTIVES

"Peace With Such An Unscrupulous and Immoral Power: Unthinkable"

New York, June 13.—The second leap of the great German rush on the western front has ended. In a few short weeks the enemy has reconquered territory that required the allies some time to win. This it must be acknowledged was accomplished by superior force. But what is the net result? The three probable objectives of the German army—dividing the French and British, crushing either army, or taking Paris—have all completely failed, and the position of the German forces today is less secure than when the drive began. What the next move will be is not yet divulged, and in the interim the enemy will be fully occupied consolidating his lines, bringing up big guns, supplies, etc., and improving transportation facilities. Possibly the full following successes will be utilized for fresh peace talk; but all such camouflage is useless; because Germany will not be likely at present to offer terms satisfactory to the allies, and a German peace with its potentialities for another war is impossible. We must not forget that Germany has no thought of retiring within her original boundaries; no willingness to give reparations for the ravishing of small nations, and absolute no repentance whatever for either the colossal crimes against justice and humanity or the wholesale violation of the entire moral code. Peace with such an unscrupulous and immoral power as Prussia, militarism is unthinkable, and that power has been considered, and in its place one established upon ideal more consonant with modern civilization. Nothing can compel such a change as this in the Prussian mind, or destroy its lust for world power, except a decisive allied victory, the outlook for which improves daily. British and French forces seem quite able to hold on, and the Americans are happily now being rushed across in surprising numbers. Already our boys have shown their mettle and given the enemy a taste of what to expect; and very shortly they will prove an important factor in the war. As for recent practical submarine attacks on defenseless American vessels in home waters, they will accomplish nothing except stimulating our energies to a still keener pitch, and in this respect they will prove more serviceable to us than to the enemy.

There are two very encouraging factors in home business affairs; the outlook for a big cotton crop and also for a large wheat crop, both of which at this period promise to be record breakers. These are two of the most important crops raised in the United States, and their promise of abundance is an encouraging one to our allies as well as to ourselves.

In other respects the crop situation is favorable and if present expectations are realized they will tend to check high prices and profiteering, for which the Food Administration has accomplished wonders in the latter direction. The law of supply and demand cannot be ignored, and the task of regulating prices will be much easier under abundance than under scarcity. In all industries pertaining to the war there is intense activity, and effort is being steadily shifted from the unnecessary to the necessary products. One source of uncertainty has been removed, and that is labor which is displaying a high degree of patriotism and steadily increasing its output; thus offsetting to some extent the losses through drafting into the army. British labor has doubled its output since the war began by means of intense effort and better methods. Such an increase of product here, however, is hardly to be expected, for the reason that American labor has long been regarded as more efficient than British and less inclined to unfair restrictions. Our industries are still moving in the direction of more absolute government control. The steel industry will probably be entirely regulated at Washington within a very short time; and now the textile manufacturers are looking in the same direction, preferring the uniformity of government control to the confusion and uncertainties of part government and part private control, with at the same time widely fluctuating margins of profit and labor problems to contend against. In all industrial affairs the prospects are for stricter government direction of both production and distribution during the war. Such efforts were at first restricted to the supplies of raw materials, but are now being directed to not a few semi-manufactured products. Whether government intervention will extend into retail distribution cannot be foretold.

More attention is now being paid to railroad shares as the importance of government backing becomes more generally recognized. Their profits on the basis of the last three years are assured for a considerable period; rates are to be liberally advanced in order to meet increased wages and other expenses; the government will provide funds for necessary improvements and rehabilitation; labor troubles under government control will be at a minimum, while simpler operation, reduction of expenses and cessation of state interferences will add to the general relief of American railroads. Our industrial face a somewhat more complex situation, as illustrated by reduction in several copper dividends. The outlook for necessary industries is still encouraging, especially steel production which for obvious reasons is liberally treated by the government. Thus far the diversion from the unnecessary to the necessary has caused relatively little hardship because of the urgency of the demand for essentials. Some industrialists will feel the coming increase in taxes which it is already intimated will be double the present rate. As these burdens will be based chiefly upon excess profits and large incomes, the government will be obliged to act discretely in formulating any new taxes, lest it destroy the profits and the enterprises out of which these taxes must be extracted. The administration is certainly likely to be wise enough to avoid drying up the sources of such a mass of easily secured revenue. This whole question of taxation is one that requires expert knowledge, also a strong sense of justice; else self injury and inadequate revenue will result. No doubt Secretary McAdoo's suggestion that one-third of the necessary revenue be raised by taxation and two-thirds by bonds will receive general approval. It is estimated that the war will cost next year 20 billions, and that to raise more than two-thirds of this by bonds would mean hurtful inflation and increase in interest rates. Apparently there is no better plan than increasing taxes, simplifying them, and distributing them as equitably as possible. The burden is an unwelcome one, but we are quite equal to it, and the call will be cheerfully met.

The recent strength of the stock market reflects general soundness of the financial situation, as well as universal confidence in the future; the latter being largely inspired by unshaken belief in ultimate victory. Prices fluctuated sharply at times, owing to profit taking and conflicting reports from the front, but the prevailing trend seems to be optimistic. The break in coppers also checked the advancing tendency. A notable change for the better was the increasing supply of time money and slightly easier rates, due presumably to the war loan being out of the way and to taxes being practically provided for. Until preparations for the next loan are in order, the money market should move fairly plain sailing. As no time since our entrance into the war has the outlook been more reassuring or less confusing. The process of mobilizing the economic machinery of the country on a war basis and placing it under government direction has been almost completed; while business is becoming more and more accustomed to the new conditions, and is running with increasing smoothness under the new regime.

Lloyd L. Case Writes About France and Compares It to Oregon

Lloyd L. Case of Co. C, Fourth U. S. Engineers, now in France, finds France somewhat different from the Willamette valley, although at times the climate is much the same. Writing to his sister Mildred Case he expresses some opinions as follows: "This is sure a pretty country but everything is old fashioned and looks as if built several years ago. All the homes are of stone and very low. "Here it is just like an Oregon summer. This is a great country for grapes as it is all rolling hills and the slopes are in vineyards. The people here seem to make their living poddling fruits and almost everything else as the roads are nearly filled up with women and children with their little carts pulled by donkeys. They sell lots of stuff to the men. "When one first attempts to make change with them he just has to take it for granted that they are giving him back the correct change for they have such a large number of coins. The most common is a Franc worth about 18 cents in American money. They have paper money worth half a franc and coppers worth two cents. The paper money is pretty big so one has quantity when you have several dollars of small change. "The 'Y' owns the canteen and things are about the same price as in the states, that is when they have them. Lots of things are quite a bit cheaper than at home. "I was sure glad to get on solid ground again after our trip on the ocean although we had a fine trip across, but the solid earth looks better to me than salt water. Wine here is about as cheap as water and I think not as scarce. I don't think the French here drink any water at all as they always have their bottles with them. "I do not know when we will get our mail but it cannot come too soon and I think the rest of the fellows feel about the same as I do for we sure do miss our mail more than anything else."

Washington, June 14.—Forced again to leave his various desks here and return to White Sulphur Springs, for further rest, Secretary McAdoo's physical condition caused some uneasiness among friends here today. Many nearest him openly declared that McAdoo should not long continue his efforts at joint administration of two of the greatest jobs in the country today—the treasury and the railway. That he should turn over completely the treasury work to some one else is

Knowledge of Sewing and Cooking Beats the High Brow Stuff

Half a dozen or more girls who will appear in the graduating class of the high school this evening at the armory will wear dresses they have made themselves all due to the instruction received in the Home Economics department of the school. This department under the instruction of Miss Nell Sykes, has been demonstrating the past year that not only can the girls learn a lot about the practical side of life, but that in the present changing conditions the knowledge of how to make one's own clothing in case of necessity is of equal or greater value than some forms of higher education. For not only have the girls in this class of 75 learned to sew for themselves, but many have devoted their talents in this direction in helping the home folks and in making the greater part of their wearing apparel.

In the cooking department of the Home Economics in charge of Miss Purinton, the girls during the past year have been given practical instruction in home cooking besides the theoretical part of the work. During the past term this department has served from 45 to 50 lunches a day to high school students and have charged what appeared to be a bare margin above the cost, the idea being service rather than profit. By careful buying and close figuring and the prevention of waste of all kinds everywhere, the class has not only paid its expenses, but now has $100 in its treasury which will be used for buying better equipment next year.

With a practical knowledge of sewing and the knowing how to cook and how to buy, the girl graduate who has taken advantage of the Home Economics course and then possibly some study in the commercial course of the Salem high school, is much better prepared to face the practical world of today than if the time had been given to the study of ethics theories and the higher education that has no application to the practical affairs of life.

not considered impossible. With the fourth liberty loan less than four months off, McAdoo finds himself swamped with railroad questions.

To conserve the man power of the nation, Herbert Hoover has dispensed with the services of his chauffeur. By having never hired one we feel that in this instance we beat Mr. Hoover to it.

Italians Break Up Strong Austrian Attack

Rome, June 14.—An Austrian attack, designed to force the important Tonale Pass was broken up by Italian forces, which drove the enemy back and inflicted heavy losses, the war office announced today. Counter attacks drove the enemy back with heavy losses."

Chicago, June 14.—Ten minutes after he had been elected president of the American Medical Association, Major Alexander Lambert, New York, started to France, it became known today. Plans for reconstruction of wounded soldiers and sailors occupied its attention through the final session of meetings. Intense interest was indicated in the general discussion today of plans outlined by Surgeon General Gorgas for establishing 16 hospitals in America for reconstruction surgery.
