Laclede, Missouri, Prominently On Map

Laclede, Mo., July 4.—This town was 'on the map" today. . Few perhaps ever heard of Laclede, Mo., but where is the man who hasn't heard of John J. Pershing? He's from Laclede_"from our town."

Laclede, the birthplace of the great American general, was celebrating to-day with all the pride and glory that goes with a celebration in the "old home town" for one of their number ing only three outside pockets on their who has gone out into the world and won renown.

"Folks" here today recounted the days when "Black Joe" was a mere barefooted boy; when they baked sweets they don't bake anymore, that gave him strength to raid the apple orchard or tradge miles to Locust-creek for a swin. They saw nothing unusual in "Johnny" those days.

And these old folks for some of them are white haired and bent—still call-ed him "Johnny" today, and told of his pranks when a boy. The old town
