PRESIDENT HOLDS CONFERENCE OVER RUSSIAN PROBLEM

Army and Navy Officials Receive Hurried Call From White House

Washington, July 5.—Momentous decisions in respect to the inter-allied war council's urge for economic and military aid for Russia were believed in the making this afternoon at an important conference at the White House.

President Wilson summoned the heads of the state, war and navy departments at 2 o'clock and Secretaries Baker, Daniels and Lansing; Chief of Staff March and Admiral Benson, chief of naval operations, responded. Maps covering "the Russian project" were taken to the conferences shortly afterward.

The conference adjourned at 3:40 and Secretaries Baker and Daniels, coming out together, declined to discuss their session.

Secretary Daniels admitted that some American marines had been put ashore to guard the American consulate at Vladivostok, but when asked whether sailors or marines were to be sent to along the Murman coast, he answered only:

"I can only discuss one place at a time. Russia is a pretty big place."

General March and Admiral Benson were in earnest conversation as they departed, but made no comment. It is believed that much of the discussion hinged upon the matter of military aid via the Murman coast. Sailors already have been landed there by the United States and the allies and it is understood that the United States is in a position to increase the force in that region more rapidly than at Vladivostok.

Chevrolet Fair Ones Busy Pitching Hay

"All the joys of a farmer's life" are more or less mythical, according to the opinion reached by a score of fair Chevrolet factory employes after they had put in one brief day in regulation farmerette attire, pitched hay and otherwise conducted themselves like true daughters of the soil. The one experience, they say, convinces them it is far more pleasant to do their tasks in a modern motor car plant and leave the outdoor stuff for the men.

At the big Chevrolet factory in Oakland is a twenty acre field where a crop of oats sowed in the spring grew like magic. The grain was beginning to dry up and blow away, and to save it a hurry-call was sent in for volunteers. "Let the girls do it" was the answer from the shops. But the girls wouldn't; they hadn't any proper costumes—and what fun is there in being a farmerette in skirts?

Manager Capwell of one of Oakland's big department stores solved this feature, with twenty suits of "coveralls". Another store had twenty hats on hand and when the Chevrolet girls appeared with their rakes and pitchforks they were modern "Maud Mullers". With a Chevrolet one-ton truck doing tractor duty and two Chevrolet light delivery vehicles substituting for the old-fashioned hay rake, the hay was soon ready to move under cover, and the girls stuck on the job until the dreary end.

But now the "near again" sign is up at the Chevrolet factory when anyone mentions "farmerettes." Even the snappy one-piece suits and straw hats are not sufficient lure to draw the girls from their regulation duties and into the fields as reapers of the harvest. Only as a patriotic measure will they garb rakes and pitchforks and go forth to tame the hay.

HOPE ABANDONED FOR MISSING MEN

Six Men Lost with Torpedoed American Transport Covington

Washington, July 6.—Practically all hope for rescue of six men missing from the torpedoed American transport Covington had been given up today.

While naval vessels still hunted for them, it was believed they would have been found before now were they still on the seas, inasmuch as the torpedoing occurred Monday night.

The vessel, hit by a torpedo from an unseen submarine, floated until Tuesday, when an unavailing effort was made to tow her to a French port. All but the six missing men were transferred safely and taken to a French port. Good order prevailed.

The vessel, homeward bound, was struck in the war zone.

The navy communique said none was "seriously injured," indicating perhaps there were some slightly hurt. The Covington was formerly the German liner Cincinnati.

 State House News *****

Hearing on the application of the American Railway express company for a 10 per cent increase on intrastate express rates has been set by the public service commission for 10 o'clock July 17, at the commission's offices in the court house, at Portland.

Estimates made by the superintendents of state institutions show that the state training school for boys probably will need a deficiency appropriation of $16,000 to carry it through the year. The school for girls will need $3500, the tuberculosis hospital $9000 and the school for deaf $1000. Later in the year the emergency board probably will be asked to authorize deficiencies in these amounts.

The public service commission today approved of a 15 per cent increase in freight rates on logs on the Sumpter Valley railroad.

Judge John S. Coke of Marshfield, who ran second in the race for the republican nomination for justice of the supreme court, was here today visiting Attorney General Brown and Justice Harris, old friends.

The teachers' examining board which has been marking the papers of the applicants who took the recent examination for teachers' certificates completed its labors today. The board comprised about 30 teachers, who have been in session at the state house all week.

A baby girl arrived last night at the home of ex-Governor Oswald West, in Portland, according to word received in Salem today.

The final details of the contract between the state desert land board and the Jordan Valley Land & Water company were completed today at a conference between O. G. Hagan, attorney of Boise, Idaho, and Paul S. Bickel, chief engineer for the company, and State Engineer Lewis and Attorney General Brown, for the construction of a big irrigation project in Malheur county. The first unit of the project will cover approximately 23,000 acres. Work is already under way, but Mr. Bickel said the force will be increased now that all the preliminary details in connection with the contract are out of the way. The project is under the Carey act.

Stocks Are Firmer In Wall Street Today

New York, July 6.—The New York Evening Sun financial review today said:

Today's short session of the stock exchange, although narrow in scope, maintained generally a firm tone with price gains for the most part fractional. The advances were due chiefly to the scarcity of offerings.

The opening was fractionally higher and for the first hour the market held its early gains. American Can, with a gain of 1 1/2 made the largest increase in price, but the steels, equipments, coppers, and alcohol stocks advanced fractionally. Little attention was paid to the rail list.

In the second hour the market became irregular, but the fluctuations generally were fractional.

Burnquist, and the Minnesota public safety commission, according to a telegram the mayor received from the state executive early today.

The text of the governor's telegram to Mayor Van Lear follows: "It is primarily the duty of the city administration to uphold law and order within your city limits. You are therefore directed to stop forthwith the street disturbances and riots in Minneapolis."

Whatever may be the grievances, an adjustment can and must be secured without assaulting citizens and the destruction of their property.
