RUSSIAN FAILURE HAS STRENGTHENED GERMANS

This is Only Source of Satisfaction For People of Central Empires.

New York, July 13, 1918. Russia's collapse has doubtless reinforced Germany, and in consequence pro-Germanism, so far as the map is concerned, has come nearer realization than anticipated. Naturally the German people are encouraged, despite the failure of the last big drive, and the military leaders use the situation for all it is worth, keeping their people ignorant of the one great fact: that the military power of the central powers is fast declining, while that of the allies is rapidly rising. At the moment the outlook is probably for a longer struggle, because German power of endurance has been increased by use of Russian resources, while our own army, which must offset these gains, will require enlargement to meet the full strength that may be required. We are making efforts commensurate with our powers as a nation, and there is no doubt whatever of the result. Our government is now considering a change of policy towards Russia. Thus far we have done little beyond offering moral and financial support. It is evident that Russia cannot recover without some strong central leadership, either from within or without. Leadership from within is not yet forthcoming. Encouragement from without is the only apparent way of preventing Germany from permanently holding Russia in its talons. Russia is evidently backward in calling for Japan's aid, and she seems to fear the selfishness of other nations. There is no country which can offer disinterested assistance so completely as the United States; and if force is needed, as seems likely, active participation of the United States would rearsure Russian sensibilities and be an important factor toward bringing Russia back into the war on the eastern front.

large crops together with increased freight and passenger rates will enable the administration to treat the roads handsomely without involving any expense to the government. The stammering block between the landlords and their tenants has been the amount that could be expended for betterments and improvements. The provision concerning this item is now so worded there is no longer any question of dividends being jeopardized. Uncertainty on this score has kept the railroad shares in the background but with this doubt removed there is no reason now why investors should hesitate in picking up good railroad stocks which at current quotations yield very generous returns.

The crop report showed a deterioration of 40,000,000 bushels in wheat, but still indicated a yield of 89,500,000 bushels, or 241,000,000 bushels more than last year. The wheat crop is also about equal to the next best crop in 1914, and compares with the bumper yield of 1,925,000,000 bushels in 1915. Corn promises a record yield of 3,109,000,000 bushels, which is slightly larger than last year's bumper crop. The increase of 5 1/2 million acres in corn leaves an ample margin for ordinary deterioration. The country is thus promised an abundance of the three most important crops—wheat, corn and cotton. The most serious element against the stock market is the monetary situation. War is practically absorbing all available funds, so that little is left for new enterprise, and only the most necessary calls are satisfied. Considerable refinancing has been accomplished since the last loan, but time money continues scarce and funds high. The steady outpour of treasury notes at the rate of $750,000,000 every two weeks, with unusual crop and trade requirements in prospect at high prices, are quite sufficient to keep the money market in stringent condition. There is no statement in the confident undertone of the market, nor in its excellent assisting qualities. But the recent advances in the best issues, and uncertainties as to how taxation will affect some of the industries induced more or less selling pressure. There is also considerable weakness in a number of public utilities, light and street railway issues having suffered materially through rapidly vanishing profits. Their only hope is that the federal government will set an example of fair dealing with public corporations, which municipalities seem at present indisposed to exercise. There is nothing discouraging in the financial outlook as a whole, and the market seems likely to fluctuate between moderate limits. HENRY CLEWS.

German Comment On Colored Troops Washington, July 18.—Declaring "America must be in a very bad way if she has to resort to the use of negro troops," the German wireless at Nauzen is flooding neutral countries with propaganda regarding America's colored fighters. On the other hand British and French papers are profuse in their praise of the colored detachments fighting on the west front.

AUTO MEN OPPOSE WAR BOARD ORDER

Manufacturers Do Not Like Attempt To Curtail Supply of Materials.

Washington, July 18.—A bitter fight is developing between the automobile industries and the war industries board, as a result of the government's determination to curtail supplies to these manufacturers. Officials declared today that representatives of the automobile industry threatened panic and disaster if the conservation plans were put into effect. They also declared the auto men threatened to make a campaign issue of the question and predicted dire political consequences. Officials say the auto industry was warned a year ago and should have prepared by this time for the output reduction now inevitable. Manufacturers of passenger autos have been asked by the war industries board to furnish in the next week or ten days a statement of the amount of steel on hand. This followed conferences between the board and Hugh Chalmers, vice-president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Manufacturers have asked for enough steel to found out stock on hand. They have unbalanced stocks sufficient to enable them to operate several months. The government is prepared to commandeered these stocks if need arises. This is the first non-war industry in which the government has checked up on supplies of steel on hand. It is in line with the policy of obtaining a tighter grip on steel, supplies of which are being rapidly diminished. Manufacturers last fall agreed voluntarily to reduce output thirty per cent and make no plans for the year after August 1. Possession of inventories will enable the government to assure itself there has been no evasion of this agreement. More drastic curtailment of steel allowed to the less essential industries was forecast today by high government officials. The government's requirements for the next six months are twenty million tons, it was said, while the greatest production to be expected is not in excess of 15,500,000 tons. Officials said they do not believe more than one fourth of the amount of steel customarily used for pleasure automobiles will be forthcoming. Officials said war needs will be supplied at all costs no matter to what extent industries are affected. Some manufacturers have argued to the war industries board that the government has not sufficient tonnage to transport the amount of steel which it is planned to save through conservation.

Negro Soldier Is Defender of I. W. W.

Chicago, July 18.—The invasion of his sergany chevrons caused the detention of "Sergeant" Fred Williams today at the conclusion of his testimony in defense of 100 I. W. W. leaders on trial here.

Williams, a Baltimore negro, who made a deep impression by his testifying that his I. W. W. card had steadied him through the dangers of several trips to France in charge of supplies for "the boys." He wore an army uniform and used soldier slang. "I'm in the quartermaster corps," testified Williams, "and have charge of a gang of 75 stoverders, all I. W. W.'s. They are all faithful workers. They could do lots of damage if they weren't loyal. My I. W. W. card gives me a chance to earn a living and support my family." A secret service man in the court room spied the inverted chevrons. Williams and questioning, admitted he wasn't an enlisted man, but claimed to be under contract, thereby having a right to a uniform. The prosecution regarded the incident as important, claiming the defense has circularized army and navy camps to secure witnesses.

All testimony Wednesday was intended to show I. W. W. loyalty. Williams was the only "soldier" among the witnesses.

Austria-Hungary—Budapest newspaper Pester Lloyd admitted that "American intervention is having its effects."
