Professional Market In Wall Street Today

New York, July 23.—The Evening Sun financial review today said:

The stock market today degenerated for the most part into a professional scalping affair. Fluctuations, outside of a few stocks subject to special influences, were meaningless.

The outstanding feature of this new day was, the thin buying power, a natural development, in view of the tightness of the money market and the apprehension regarding taxation possibilities.

Dealings throughout the late trading lacked significance and the market continued dull. United States Steel at 104 5/8 made a new low for the day at that figure was 1 1/2 points below Monday's close.

There was no new factor, large or small, to influence the course of the prices.

N. Berkeley, federal employment agent at Pendleton, states that last week he placed something over 100 farm workers, and fully 25 men a day are being placed in the harvest fields through the Pendleton agency.

SIX CENT FARE IS UPHeld BY COURT IN DECISION TODAY

Supreme Court Affirms Legality of Action of Public Service Commission

Portland's six-cent street car fare was upheld today by an opinion handed down by the supreme court. The opinion was written by Justice Burnett. The court held that the power once possessed by the city of Portland to fix rates in franchises was given the city by the state, and since then it has been withdrawn by the state and placed in the public service commission. As a consequence the commission has authority to change the rates in a franchise and the question of impairment of a contract is not involved.

The decision affects every town or city in the state which may be attempting to hold public service utilities to the rates fixed in their franchises.

In a synopsis of the court's decision, Justice Burnett says:

"The contention of the city in the main is that the franchise granted by its ordinance to the Portland Railway, Light & Power company constituted a contract between it and the company, the obligation of which could not be impaired by the action of the public service commission. The court holds in substance that the city could not have granted such a franchise unless the power to do so had been delegated to it by the right to maintain the railway in the city the municipality acted as a governmental agency of the state and really entered into the arrangement on behalf of the state; that the latter, having delegated authority to the city and made an agent of the city for the purpose in question, could rightfully revoke that agency and establish another; that by the enactment of the public service law it had created such a new agency in the form of the public service commission, giving it plenary power in all such matters.

"So far as it affects the Portland charter, it is true that the constitution denies to the legislative assembly the power to enact or amend any particular charter by a special law, but, as held in the case of Rose against the Port of Portland, it is competent for that body to pass a general law which is paramount in authority over all city charters, and this is what happened when it passed the general public service law which was approved by the people on the referendum.

"The case of the city is not aided by the fact that it sought to amend its charter by the initiative process after the passage of the public service legislation so as to assume for itself within the territory substantially all the powers of the public service commission. The reason for this is that the right to fix fares and freights is a branch of the state's legislative prerogative and is not merely a local issue affecting any particular city or town and that the initiative and referendum powers are reserved to legal voters of cities and towns only as to local, special and municipal legislation. The entire question of regulating public service corporations in their charges for their services to the public is referable to the authority of the state on such subjects. The whole public, and not any local municipality, is affected by this power and no city or town can so amend its charter as to arrogate to itself powers primarily reserved to the state, without the consent of the latter. Whatever may be said of the franchise of the company, whether it be an agreement between contracting parties or a piece of legislation, it exists subject to the ever-present police power of the state so to regulate it that in its relation to the public the company shall render reasonable services and be entitled to a reasonable remuneration therefor.

"The conclusion is that by the general law relating to public service corporations the state had a right to, and did, in effect, withdraw from the city of Portland the agency authorizing it to grant a franchise to, or enter into a contract with the company for a five-cent fare, and appointed another agency, the public service commission, with full power to act for the state, and that to this new agency the company had applied for a change in the agreement, with the result that the parties to the contract, the company on one side and the state, represented by its public service commission, on the other, mutually agreed to change the franchise or contract so as to allow the company to charge six cents instead of five. Without regard to what might be said if either party to the contract or franchise, without the consent of the other, should attempt to change it, either by legislation or otherwise, the impairment of the obligation of the agreement is not involved. It is a case where those who made the contract had mutually agreed to its amendment."

Other Opinions.

Other opinions were handed down as follows:

W. W. Green vs. Harold Smith et al. appellants; appealed from Linn; suit for foreclosure of mortgage; opinion by Justice Benson; Circuit Judge Galloway affirmed.

C. W. Horst vs. Columbia Contract company, appellant; appealed from Multnomah; suit for damages resulting from collision of steamboat with fishing boat; opinion by Justice Bean; Circuit Judge Davis affirmed.

First Savings Bank of Albany vs. Lydia L. Myer, et al., appellants; appealed from Linn; suit for foreclosure of mortgage; opinion by Justice Bean; Circuit Judge Galloway affirmed.

BRIDGE COMMITTEES WORKING WITH WILL FOR CELEBRATION

Great Red Cross Benefit Celebration Will Be History-Making Event

One week from today, Tuesday, July 30, Salem will be observing with appropriate ceremonies, the dedication of the new bridge across the Willamette river. Built at a cost of a quarter of a million dollars the bridge will be entirely paid for at the time of dedication.

The chairman of the several committees are already active in preparing their special parts of the program, and the indications are that when the day arrives Salem will be ready to entertain a crowd that will rival in numbers the big event when the Liberty bell stopped for a few hours in the city.

Charles R. Areherd, chairman of the committee on auctions, says: "The privilege of being the first person to drive across the new bridge will be auctioned off at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning from the grand stand. Those who anticipate bidding are requested to have their autos convening in order that the highest bidder may be ready at once to head the procession."

John W. Todd, chairman of the committee on music, says: "We are already in correspondence with several bands for the big day. The songs for the community sing in the evening have already been selected. The Cherrin band will accompany the singers for the most popular songs."

Dr. E. E. Lee Steiner, chairman of the committee on entertainment, says: "The entertainment committee will see that something is doing from the time the early morning auction begins until the close of the day's program at Marion square. We expect a big crowd for the occasion and the entertainment committee will see that it is properly taken care of."

A. A. Lee, chairman of the committee on speakers, says: "The dedicatory address of the morning will be delivered by Justice George H. Burnett. The two other speakers of the day will be men of prominence, befitting such an occasion, but the committee is not as yet ready to announce their names."

Dr. H. H. Olinger, chairman of the committee on concessions, says: "Our committee has already made arrangements for a merry-go-round in order that the children may enjoy the day. There will be a dancing pavillion, for which a concession has been granted and several concessions for the serving of ice cream."

W. T. Higdon, chairman of the parade committee, is in conference with the military men and those who will be asked to take part in the parade. Within a day or so, the committee will be able to make its final arrangements. The souvenir committee, with Henry W. Myers, chairman, has been busy for several weeks and already has on hand the souvenir flags, and has everything in readiness for the big event.

While there has been some discussion as to closing hours for the day, there has been no definite plan arranged. However, the general opinion is that at least all stores in the city should close at noon. This matter will come before the Business Men's league, C. S. Hamilton, director.

State House News

Wynter Willis, who was sent to the penitentiary from Multnomah county, escaped yesterday afternoon while enjoying the privileges of a trusty. He is 24 years old and twice has been sentenced to prison. He was first sentenced for larceny, and was paroled in 1916. Then he was convicted of stealing an automobile and was given a sentence of one year. He had completed that sentence last April and was now serving the balance of his first sentence. Prison officials say they think he made his escape on a motorcycle furnished him by a boy who was formerly in the state training school.

Negative arguments against two of the measures which will be voted on next November were filed today with Secretary of State O'Leary. One is against the bill closing the Willamette river to commercial fishing below Oregon City to near Oswego. The argument was filed by the Clackamas County Fishermen's Union. The other is against the bill appropriating $200,000 for a home for dependent, delinquent and defective children. It was filed by the Taxpayers League of Portland, L. J. Goldsmith secretary.

Upon his return from Medford, State Engineer Lewis reports having received an offer in writing from the Rego River Valley Canal company to dispose of Fish Lake and Four Mile Lake reservoirs, and its canals and water rights to the Medford Irrigation district at $250,000, reserving only 10 second feet of water for use on the company lands.

The former offer was $400,000. This was not given serious consideration by the directors of the irrigation district. They are disposed, however, to analyze the new offer and ascertain the value of existing canals and works to the proposed project, according to Mr. Lewis.

Dr. Steiner, superintendent of the Oregon state hospital, reports that the earth beneath the big water tank at the asylum has sunk eight or 10 feet, and he was in today, to get the state engineer to make an investigation to see what should be done to protect the tank. It may be, he says, that the pump has drained a lake about 80 feet beneath the surface and that is the cause of the earth's settling.

Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Commercial Hotel company of Lakeview. It has a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are C. E. Sherlock, Harry Bailey, E. H. Smith, S. V. Hehart and John C. Flynn.

Female Bell-Hops Latest War Contribution

Farmerettes, chaufferettes, conductorettes—what next you ask. Why, female bell-hops, to be sure! "Call for Senator Smith" will now be trilled by sweet soprano voices instead of the deep, raucous bass which will soon be a thing of the past. This is a group picture of the page girls at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York, who are contributing their mite to woman power so as to release man power.

Hearst Is Candidate For Primary Nomination

Saratoga, N. Y., July 23.—William Randolph Hearst, New York publisher, reiterated today through his representative, Lawrence J. O'Reilly, that he is in the race for the democratic nomination for governor. This was stated today as delegates prepared to open their state convention here.

A canvass of delegates from the upstate counties showed only one, Albany for the New York City delegation was almost solid for Hearst.

Both Mayor Henry C. Walker of Binghamton and Alfred E. Smith of New York have many supporters, Smith as yet had not announced his intentions.

Many delegates believed James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany had been definitely removed from consideration with the avowed intention of Hearst to run.

William Church Osborn is still in the race, his managers declared, but his name will not be before the convention. He will depend on the primaries, without endorsement.

Indications early today were that a plank would be inserted in the platform calling for a referendum on the question of ratifying the federal prohibition amendment. It also is probable there will be a plank favoring either government or municipal ownership of public utilities.

The upstate delegates will meet tonight and endeavor to agree on some man they all will endorse.

I. W. W. Recommended As Liquor Cure

Chicago, July 23.—The I. W. W. today was recommended as a liquor cure, an educator and a power for good. Wallace Smith, Spokane, Wash. logger and one of the I. W. W. leaders on trial here, gave his "testimonial" from the witness stand in federal court, and learned to read his literature.

Smith declared he was illiterate until he became interested in the I. W. W. "It cured me of booze, too," he said. "I know other fellows it cured, too."

Smith was one of the defense witnesses intended to prove the I. W. W. had not planned a "strike offensive" to prevent conscription. The lumber strike of last year, he said, was an effort to win the first wage increase since 1907.

Three automobile wheels and tires were stolen last evening from machines at the Chautauqua grounds. Dr. E. E. Fisher reported to the police his loss. Later Ralph Bailey, living on rural route 2, Salem, reported his extra tire and wheel had been stolen while he attended the Chautauqua lecture and Mrs. Fred Lamport the loss of the extra wheel and tire carried on her car. All wheels were of the standard 3 1/2 by 30 inches. Up to late this afternoon the thieves had not been located. There is just a suspicion that a gang of Portland auto thieves are following the Chautauqua, stealing the tires during the evening performance and well on their way to Portland before the loss is discovered.

In accordance with a recent order of the city council of Lakeview, pool billiards and all card playing have been taboo since midnight of July 7.
