WILLAMETTE RIVER AT LOWEST STAGE

Records of Twenty-Two Years All Broken, Due To Light Rainfall.

With a stage of one foot and ten inches below the low water mark, the Willamette river at Salem reaches tonight the lowest stage in the history of the river for the past 22 years.

Since May 19, there has been a rainfall of only .67 of an inch and .69 of this came in a heavy downpour on the afternoon of July 23.

Minto island is showing larger than at any time during the past generation and although the official records have been kept since 1896 it is probable that very few living in Salem have seen the river as low as at the present time.

Opposite West Salem, there is a little water, about three feet, that the Spaulding Logging Company was obliged to secure permission from the government to dredge in order that there might be sufficient water to float logs from their logging camps.

The greatest dry spell in this section of the valley previous to this year was in the fall of 1917 when the river again was at so low an ebb that boats could scarcely reach to Salem.

After the big flood of last December when the river reached a stage of 24 feet above zero at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of December 20, the river has been gradually falling.

There was only 1.08 inches of rain during May and by June 1 the river had fallen to 1.3 feet above. June experienced two traces of rain but no rainfall and by July 1, the river had fallen to seven tenths of a foot below the water mark.

There has been no time during the past 20 years that in a period of three months so little rain has fallen as during the past months of May, June and July.

A vigorous protest has been made to Governor Withycombe by lumbermen and timbermen against opening the hunting season on August 15.

The Governor states he has looked into the situation carefully and has decided that there is no cause for undue alarm and that conditions are such that the season may be opened safely.

MARRIED MEN NOW PLACED IN CLASS 1

Those Whose Wives Have Skilled Trade Are Made Subject To Draft

The classification of married men was under consideration last evening at a meeting of the local board of exemption under the instructions recently issued to all boards in the country to scrutinize carefully the classification of married men where there are no children in the family.

While this reclassification of married men has been going on from time to time as conditions changed, the number last evening was the largest that have been given a changed classification at any session of the board.

The reclassifications are mostly from men in class 2-B which reads: "Married man without children, whose wife, although the registrant is engaged in a useful occupation, is not mainly dependent upon his labor for support."

The board has been instructed by the war department that it must also take into consideration in reclassifying men to class 1, the fact that the wife will have an income of $30 a month from the time he enters the service, half from the soldier's pay and half from the government.

 Court House Notes *****

In the case of W. C. Hubbard and Helen Hubbard against L. H. McMahon and others, the plaintiffs submitted an amended complaint in which they state: That defendant entered into a contract for property and that he failed to make a certain payment due March 26, 1914; that settlement was made in which McMahon gave Hubbard a promissory note for $16,000 and that McMahon released 20 acres to Hubbard; that there is now due on the note $15,806.04; that Eugene H. Three days later she reported his absence to the police, and since that time he has failed to return home nor could she find him. She asks for the custody of the two children.

without fear of much danger from the hunters. He states that the general rains of a few weeks ago have placed the woods in excellent shape. He also says that he has discussed the question with State Forester Elliott and he is of the same conclusion. The matter probably will come up at the meeting of the State Board of Forestry being held in Portland today.
