BENNETT THOMPSON RE-CAPTURED AND IS IN ST. HELENS TODAY

Escaped Murderer Will Be Returned to Prison by Warden Murphy

Bennett Thompson, escaped murderer from the penitentiary, has been captured near St. Helens, Oregon, and is now in the jail at that place. Warden Murphy, who is in Portland, will go to St. Helens after him today.

The penitentiary officials here have no details whatever of the capture.

The work is being done on Front and Court streets by the Southern Pacific. For several years efforts had been made to secure connection between the two roads both in Salem and Albany, but the Southern Pacific blocked every effort in that line. However, when the government took hold of the roads and gave the order to connect, there was nothing to do but to connect.

The U. S. Food administration is calling on all county administrations to provide a weekly report of the wholesale and retail price to the consumer of all commodities and it is probable that within a few days a committee will be appointed by Frank J. Chapman, manager of the Commercial club to prepare once a week this report. The government is desirous of finding out whether there is the right proportion between the price paid by the stores for various commodities and the price the consumer is asked to pay.

Rev. Carl H. Elliott Writes Of Experiences In France

The Rev. Carl H. Elliott, former pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Salem is now in the Y. M. C. A. work in France and during the Fourth of July observance was fortunate enough to happen on the platform with some of the French and English notables. In regard to his experiences he writes: "Imagine my surprise when I learned that I had stumbled onto that part of the platform where the various speakers and officials were seated. I was within ten feet of President Poincaré and could see and hear him perfectly. After the speaking, a short stocky man made his way along the front of the platform shaking hands with the president and with the speakers. It was Lloyd George. The celebration was in honor of the re-christening of one of the streets which will now be called 'Avenue du President Wilson.' The band played and two thousand of our United States troops, followed by French troops from the trenches, marched by. Above us one of the big bi-planes hovered.

"I am now stationed in a double hut. There are many thousands of American boys in and about this village not far from Paris and within an area of thirty miles there are forty of our secretaries working. We secretaries sleep in the crowd next under the rafters. We board at the instructor's mess, further down in the village. I have helped some in the canteen and met some old Salem friends and am to speak at the Hut on French Independence day.

"One cannot think without shuddering of the kind of peace which Prussia would impose on Europe. Deeper hatred would make Europe appear as if possessed of the devil, Prussia will steal all she can and will do everything to keep it. She never will remove her foot from the breast of those she has conquered or taken by surprise. She will compel foreign culture to adore her barbarism. She believes only in the nailed fist—inside and outside her frontiers."

Russell M. Brooks writes home that he is now in the intelligence service of the army and that he has been granted a three weeks leave of absence. He will put in the time visiting Monte Carlo, Nice and Marseilles. He writes that for the first time in one and one-half years he is wearing civilian's clothing.

Now is the time for prune pickers to volunteer their services, especially for the picking of green prunes. Already several have applied for work at the U. S. Employment Bureau on State street. J. R. Coleman, in charge of the office, went to Dallas this morning to attend a meeting of the prune growers when it is expected a price for picking will be established.

Things simply won't come right all the time. Now that we have one of the finest bridges in the northwest, autoists are complaining that after a fine coast from the center of the bridge into the city of Salem, they are obliged to bump the bumps across several railroad tracks that happen to run along Front street.

The foundation for the trades metal building for boys which will be erected on the high school property just south of the high school building, is now laid and before the first of September will be completed. The building is to be of lumber with the rustic V effect. Fred Nixon says that while the contract calls for its completion by Sept. 1, he expects to be ready to turn it over to the U. S. Labor Employment office in Salem reports several inquiries for labor coming in from pruned tractors.

The U. S. Labor Employment office in Salem reports several inquiries for labor coming in from pruned tractors. Also a few for evergreen blackberry pickers. While there is a scarcity of farm labor, the bureau reports there has been no recent calls for harvest hands. For those who wish to pick evergreen blackberries, it is reported that the picking is good a short distance this side of Mehana and at the junction of the north and middle forks of the south Santiam river. Evergreen blackberries are worth about five cents a pound.

Harry McLevy who was with the Midget Market before going to Camp Lewis July 25, writes interestingly of his army experiences in a letter to B. W. Macy. He is now in company 45, 166 depot brigade and is waiting for his sore arm to get into condition. He writes in part as follows: "This army life is sure wonderful for a fellow and it sure cannot help but do a lot of good. I was agreeably surprised at the leniency of the officers. I've had two of the famous 'shots' in my arm which is now pretty sore. After each 'shot' we get a 24-hour lay-off. Quite a number of the boys fell over in a faint before and after the 'shot' and some needed the doctor's care. I got along fine. We drill from six to eight hours a day and get pretty warm. I will be glad to get out of quarantine as I feel like a prisoner."

Delegates from the Salem lodge appointed by Harry J. Wenderoth, exalted ruler, to attend the state convention of Elks at Portland the last week of August, have decided to support Klamath Falls in its campaign to secure the state convention for 1919. It is thought that the principal objection to Klamath Falls is the difficulty and expense of getting there and that for the second annual convention, it might be better to select some city not quite so far from the regular line of travel.

Work began today on the physical connection between the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Electric railroads, as ordered by R. H. Alight, regional director for all railroads west of Chicago.

BACK TO HINDENBURG LINE IN ANOTHER WEEK

Europeans Will Flee If Hun Wins, Says Author

(By United Press.) Zurich, Switzerland, July 23.—(By Mail)—Should Germany succeed in domination of Europe, a general exodus of the populations of the subjugated countries would result according to Dr. Muehlen in his book "Devastated Europe," just published.

"If the Germans succeed in establishing their domination of Europe, we shall witness the flight of the Europeans," Muehlen writes. "The most remote corners of Europe will be the most sought after. If there is no spot in the old world which escapes German domination, then there will be a general exodus towards the countries across the seas, in all directions where the Germans are not.

"Europe will be a country where living conditions will not be worth while. The Germans will not be allowed to shove themselves outside their new Germania, and everyone will proudly endeavor to avoid by all means, these horrible objects—the Germans.
