BENNETT THOMPSON RETURNS TO PRISON

Murderer Spends Pleasant Two-Week Vacation In Western Oregon Hills

After a two weeks' outing in the hills, Bennett Thompson is back home again. He is busy sawing wood today. Bennett Thompson is the man who murdered Mrs. Helen Jennings and Fred Ristman, a Portland jitney driver, near Tualatin two years ago. He was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary. But two weeks ago he and Fred Thurber left for a short outing. They took their departure by night by cutting a hole through the bars in the flame which runs through the prison yards. Thompson was captured yesterday afternoon near Rainier, in Columbia county, as he was taking a drink from the Columbia river. While he had his face down to the water, Deputy Sheriff James Jesse slipped up behind him. When Thompson turned to see who was there he looked into the barrels of a brace of revolvers, and had no choice but to quietly surrender. Warden Murphy, who was in Portland with his automobile, was notified and he went to St. Helens, where Deputy Sheriff Jesse took Thompson to get the prisoner. The warden, with Prison Guard Morelock, returned Thompson to the prison last night. And his vacation is over. Thompson told his captors that if he had been given five minutes more time he would have crossed the river and caught a freight train for Seattle, from where he expected to beat his way into Canada, where he intended to join the Canadian army. "And then I would like to have seen you fellows try to get me back," he said. "You sure would have had some time trying it, believe me." He said he and Thurber, when they left the prison, walked along the Oregon Electric to Malloy, and then to Oswego. Next they went to Milwaukie and Lents, where they separated. Thompson made his way to St. Johns, where he got a row boat and crossed to Linnton, from where he made his way over mountain trails to Rainier.

REPORTERS BARRED BY CONSOLIDATION COMMITTEE TODAY

Professor Matthews' Report Was Considered at Secret Session This Morning

When the state consolidation commission met today, its first official action was to adopt a motion in favor of holding a secret session, and the newspaper men present were invited to leave. The motion for a secret session was made by Herman Von Borstel, secretary of the commission, at the request of Professor J. M. Matthews, the consolidation expert employed by the commission. No one seconded the motion, but Chairman Johnson put it to a vote. Von Borstel voted aye; no one voted no, so the motion was declared carried. It was stated that the commission wanted to talk over a few things, and probably this afternoon an open session would be held when the newspaper representatives could be present. The plan, as outlined, is to abolish all elective state offices, except those of the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer, which are constitutional and cannot be abolished without an amendment to the constitution. In place of the elective offices the governor will be given authority to appoint, practically all the state officials, the same as the Kaiser now does in Germany. It is proposed to divide the state government into eight or nine departments and provide for a chief or a commissioner to head each department. In most cases, these commissionships will be new and extra offices, while the present officials might be retained as bureau chiefs under the commissionships. One of the changes proposed is to take all the state institutions from the Portland during the month of July totaling $275,835, according to figures compiled by State Fire Marshal Wells. These figures include the $170,000 loss sustained by the big Heppner fire. There were 55 fires in the state, of which nine were caused by defective flues. That the passage of senate bill 313, now pending before congress, will be a big boost for inland cities as it will give them a lower freight rate from eastern points, is the declaration of Public Service Commissioner Corey in a letter to C. K. Cranston, secretary of the Commercial Association of Portland. The purpose of the bill is to render the interstate commerce commission powerless to grant lower rates from the east to Pacific coast terminals than is granted to inland points having a shorter haul. "I believe that now that the railroads are under federal control it is the opportune time to secure this legislation," says Commissioner Corey.

Use Commission Funds For Hospital—Beckwith

Harvey Beckwith, chairman of the state industrial accident commission, is in favor of using funds of the commission to build a special hospital for the commission on the grounds of the University of Oregon Medical school in Portland. He says the business of the commission is grown until a hospital is badly needed to give the best attention to the men injured in industrial accidents throughout the state. The revenues of the commission are now so large, he points out, that one month's income would be sufficient to build the hospital. It is his idea that in connection with the hospital should be an administrative building for housing the commission and its large force of employees. But before any such plan takes definite shape, he says the employers and employees who are the chief contributors to the industrial accident fund should be consulted and should give their approval. "The money really belongs to them," said Chairman Beckwith, "and if they approved the plan for building a hospital I do not believe there would be any objection from other sources, as the hospital would be built with their money and would not cost the general taxpayer a cent." Mr. Beckwith is going to take the matter up with some of the biggest employers, who contribute the largest sums to the fund, and if they approve the proposition would be put up to the next legislature.

State House Notes

The Great Northern Railway Company cleaned up a net income last year of $23,021,741, which is $1,268,233 less than the company's net income the previous year, according to the company's annual statement filed with the public service commission. The company's operating revenues for the year were $88,534,163. Its operating expenses were $65,512,422. Fire losses in the state outside of

STRATEGY OF FOCH DOES NOT INCLUDE USELESS SLAUGHTER

Only Limited Objectives Were Sought In Recent Offensive

New York, Aug. 13.—The allies' advance is slowing down in conformity with Marshal Foch's settled policy of not wasting the lives of his troops when time is working so powerfully on the side of the allied cause. In substitution for direct assaults with their heavy casualties to the attacking troops, Marshal Foch is again reverting to his squeeze plays. Pressure at strategic points is now the dominant feature in plans now being formed at Foch's headquarters. The Germans must eventually fall back to the old Hindenburg line and beyond the Chemin-Des-Dames, as well, and Marshal Foch is showing that he will not force this retirement within any given number of days. Neither the Marne attack nor the present drive in Picardy constitutes a true major offensive. Marshal Foch issued a firm veto in each series of operations against any extension of the assaults beyond strictly limited objectives. The enemy was caught in traps on both occasions and outguessed and out-generalled. During the Marne engagements, as well as now, Marshal Foch has revealed that it is useless for Von Hindenburg to seek to entrap the allies. At the point where Von Hindenburg sets out to " lure the allies on," Marshal Foch immediately brings his commands to a standstill. This display of caution and of regard for the lives of his men is in full conformity with Marshal Foch's ultimate strategy. Neither Picardy nor the Chemin-Des-Dames, nor even the Belgian border contains the allies' main objective. That objective is the River Rhine and beyond. It would be short sighted policy for Marshal Foch to use up his main power driving Von Hindenburg back to Belgium by direct assaults through French territory, in preference to use this same main power for an invasion of Germany. Once the allies enter Germany's millions are well into Germany, the rest will follow. But, in the meantime, whenever Von Hindenburg commits gross errors of strategy, Marshal Foch's purpose is to take full advantage of these mistakes. Thus the allies' casualties will be kept down for the great drive to the Rhine, but meanwhile German morale will be subjected to steady deterioration.

SPAIN MAY BREAK WITH GERMANS IS LATE LONDON REPORT

Torpedoing of Two Spanish Steamers Has Caused Serious Rupture

London, Aug. 13.—That a break between Spain and Germany is likely was reported here this afternoon. The sinking of two Spanish steamers by German submarines led to considerable unrest in Madrid. This was followed by the internment of the crew of a U-boat that sought refuge in a Spanish port. In spite of this, the Spanish cabinet, following a special meeting Sunday, issued a statement declaring that it was vital for Spain to maintain its neutrality. Rumor Creates Interest. Washington, Aug. 13.—Reports that Spain may be about to break with Germany were received here with undisguised interest today. Confidential reports here have long indicated that Alphonso's has been "on the fence" awaiting developments. There is a strong Germanophile element in the country, particularly in the army, but reports show this element has been greatly tempered by the thinking classes in Spain. Curtailments of raw materials to that country, hampering its great manufactures, also had a contributing influence toward changing public opinion and enthusiasm over German progress. The crudity of German diplomacy, combined with the Teuton U-boat activity against Spanish ships, shortage of food and raw materials, and the growing strength of the allies in the west, all tended to win favor for the allies. Recently, reports here show, even former pro-German newspapers have exclaimed over the great work of the American army and have ceased to praise of German military prowess. Spain is understood to have about 2,000,000 men who could be put fully equipped, into military service. control of the state board of control and appoint a commissioner to run them. This commissioner would be appointed by the governor. It is proposed to put all the departments having to do with labor under one head, with an advisory committee to represent what is now the industrial welfare commission. This committee will be chairman of the state industrial accident commission and will have two deputy commissioners to serve with him, while the commission as now organized will be abolished. No recommendations are being made as to the salaries which should be paid these new commissioners, but Mr. Von Borstel, secretary of the consolidation commission, said the idea was to get bigger men than now fill the state offices. All the members of the commission, who were appointed by the governor, are present, as follows: A. J. Johnson, Corvallis; Herman Von Borstel, Portland; James Fullerton, Roseburg; Frank Patton, Astoria; T. J. Scroggin, La Grande; John Carkin, Medford; Charles Rudeen, Portland.

In the case of J. F. Morris against the Gates Mill Co., as receiver, W. I. Needham was ordered by the court to sell at private sale for cash the logs, timber, slab wood and other materials at the mill in controversy in the present law suit. The mill is at Selroeder's landing.

An affidavit opposing the appointment of a receiver in the case of W. C. Hubbard against L. H. McMahon and others was filed yesterday in the circuit court by Mr. McMahon. In his affidavit opposing the appointment of the receiver, Mr. McMahon alleges that he entered into an agreement in writing with Mr. Hubbard, dated July 10, 1916, whereby the time for payment was extended three years and that all credits due him have not been made on the note. That 120 acres of the premises had been sold to different parties eight or nine years ago in orchard tracts and that the owners had neglected their tracts, causing decrease in the orchards. That he (McMahon) had pulled and cleared 80 acres last year at an expense of $1200 and that 16,800 trees were still on the property and that it would cost $2000 to remove them. That he had dry plowed most of the 80 acres and will soon have all in fall seedling and that it will cost $900 for the seed and $1500 to clear the land. He alleges that his son, Eugene H. McMahon, now in the service, has property valued at $4000 outside of the tract in question. That the 200 acres had no crop for eight or nine years and that it should produce from $15,000 to $20,000 in wheat the coming year. That his son expected to clear up the 80 acre tract with his caterpillar engine but could get no furlough to do the work, although $600 had been spent in fixing the engine. That no engineers could be found who could run the caterpillar, and that he is agent in charge of the tract for his son, Eugene H. McMahon.

Mamie Blanchard filed suit for divorce against C. B. Blanchard. They were married at Independence May 14, 1906, and have four children, ages 10, 8, 6 and 4 years. A supplemental complaint was filed by the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance company, against R. R. Ryan in their suit of foreclosure against the Ryan building, opposite the Marion Hotel. The original suit was for $15,000 and the company asks for an addition of $258 as it had paid out this amount for insurance on the building.

H. H. Chance has filed suit for divorce against Hattie J. Chance. He alleges that she deserted him. They were married May 15, 1908, and he asks for the custody of the three children.

The matter of the estate of Martha S. Morton, deceased, the executor Chas. E. Morton reported that at private sale he sold to Matilda J. Hausman for $50, subject to incumbrance, lots 3 and 4, block 79, Woodstock addition to Portland.

Fred J. Siewert, executor of the estate of Daniel A. Siewert petitioned Judge Bushey for permission to loan $800 funds of the estate to E. R. and Mary E. Palmer, on Salem real estate security, for one year at seven per cent. The petition was granted.
