PICKING HIS BERRIES.

G. W. Slagel, a farmer, living on the Waldo Hills, who has one of the best berry patches in that part of the country has been making good with them and has had lots of fun in finding out who has been helping him to pick the berries. There is a young man who lives near him that called his best girl on the phone and invited her and others to go and pick berries while the owner was gone todinner. The parties hastened toward the berry patch as soon as he was seen going home but sent a scout ahead to see if any one was left there. After appearing on the scene young Edward reported the coast was clear to his comndes and for them to come on. Just then a girl, one of the owner's family, called to Edward to come and see the crawfish. It seemed that the scout must have been equipped with a self starter for he ran, scattering buckets that rolled down the hill, in his first fail, and yell-ing to the athers, "no it ain't, the coast is not clear?" The last seen of him he was still running and as soon as things quieted down the other par-ties departed.
