"HUNTER'S PARADISE" YET TO BE FOUND IN THE CANADIAN PACIFIC ROCKIES AND ALASMA

Bringing in the Big Moode

Peets and novelists talk about the "hunter's paradise." This still exists, but it is no longer at the door of the hunter, or even within a few hours' journey. The last great haunts of the big game today are the Canadian Rockies and Alaska. In these two places big game is yet plentiful, and the reasonable sportsman, who has nothing of the "game hog" in his system—and what good sportsman has?—may satisfy his ambition to enjoy a few weeks of the same sort of hunting that "Leatherstocking." Cooper's famous hero, found at his very elbow, and to place or the walls of his great hall or his dining room, the heads of mose, deer, Rocky Mountain goats, bear and other specimens as witness of his prowess as a marksman.
