All that is needed by the pupil that works next week is to secure a letter showing that the time away from school was actually spent in working.

One of the men of the state engineer's office who is greatly interested in the bridge took time for half an hour this morning to estimate the number of automobiles crossing. With a stage of two feet below the low water mark the present generation is seeing more of the coast line of the Willamette river and more of Minto Island than it can remember back into the early 80's. The government's record of the stage of the river goes back 20 years. During these years when records were kept, the lowest recorded was last year when the official record shows a low water stage of one foot and eight tenths below. Those interested in noting the stage of the river may post themselves, by observing the new gauge placed by the government on the east pier of the new bridge, facing water street.

Steusloff is chairman of the county Council of Defense and, per instructions, before any building may be done, the application must be made to him, accompanied by an affidavit.

Mrs. A. H. Tasker Missing From Home Since Sunday

Friends of Mrs. A. H. Tasker, who formerly lived in Salem in Yew park, are seriously alarmed over her absence as no word has been heard from her since Sunday morning when she disappeared from her home in Portland. For the past two or three years Mrs. and Mrs. Tasker with their two sons, have made their home in Salem on account of its educational advantages. Homer Tasker, the oldest son attending Willamette university.

A few months ago the family returned to their home in Portland. Last Sunday morning when Mr. Tasker and the younger son were attending church, Mrs. Tasker disappeared. So far the only clue of her whereabouts since Sunday morning is from the street car conductor who said that a woman answering Mrs. Tasker's description, had boarded a car, asking the way to the Union depot. The matron of the depot remembers a woman asking about trains to Canada Sunday morning.

The Tasker family formerly lived in Canada, where Mr. Tasker still has large holdings. Every effort has been made to locate her, including advertising and publishing her picture in the Portland papers. Friends in the city last evening received word that no clue whatever had been found as to her whereabouts. She is described as follows: Five feet, nine inches high, weight about 132, dark brown eyes, hair slightly gray, birthmark on left cheek, age about 45 years, wore blue serge suit with light straw hat. The Taskers live at 1735 East Stark street Portland.

In the general canvass, it is possible that some may have been overlooked and no one asked to subscribe, even business houses and offices may have been overlooked by solicitors. The executive committee has made it known that in cases where one has not been solicited, application for the loan should be made to one of the banks.

Little Doing In Market But Prices Are Firm

New York, Sept. 26.—The New York Evening Sun financial review today said: Aside from some pool activity in a few individual shares among the specialties, there was little in today's stock market to attract attention. There appeared to be considerable real interest in the marines after initial strength. Steel foundries, was very buoyant and American Ice also. Mixed movement within fractional limits for the most part featured the standard list in the last hour. Steel rallied after dipping below 110. The rails were lightly dealt in. ## Gambling Games At Grounds Quickly Stopped

Gambling games made their appearance at the state fair grounds again this year and four or five of them were put out of business yesterday by the state police, after District Attorney Max Gehlhar pointed them out to the police.

Last year 21 gambling games were suppressed by District Attorney Gehlhar, who had to threaten to have the whole bunch arrested before the state fair management would take any action toward putting them off the grounds. The stockmen at the fair passed resolutions condemning the operation of gambling games on the fair grounds.

The same men who were put out of business last year were conducting the games of chance again this year.
