IN SPITE OF STORM YANKEE DRIVE PROCEEDS

Surprise Was Big Factor In Latest Great American Victory

By Fred S. Ferguson (United Press Staff Correspondent) Sept. 28.—The Franco-American attack in the Champagne-Argonne region is continuing.

Heavy rains have turned the roads, churned by shell fire, into almost impassable bogs, but the American field artillery is bravely struggling to keep pace with the infantry. Even the heaviest guns are being moved slowly forward, although with extreme difficulty.

Masses of enemy infantry were reported in the woods near Clerges yesterday and an artillery barrage was laid down against the center of our new front line, but no counter attack developed.

Used As Rest Sector. The surprise element contributing to the success of the Franco-American offensive is emphasized by identification of German divisions which makes apparent the fact that the enemy was using the region from the Argonne forest to the Meuse as a rest sector. They had no reserves in any sufficient number in the rear, although there were heavy forces further south in Lorraine.

military railroad near Varennes. They had been fed only on beets and were nearly starved.

A captured order declares the attack was expected Wednesday in the Champagne and Lorraine sectors. It directed certain re-disposition of troops to meet these attacks. It included plans for a withdrawal of infantry to the new main line of defense and instructed the artillery to take up new positions.

As a result, much of the artillery was caught on the roads and was unable to respond to the American fire. Time Table of Attack. The time table of the attack called for a destructive fire, which started at 11:30 p. m. The preparation fire, involving guns of all calibres, began at 2:30 p. m. The infantry jumped off at 5:20. Vauquois, the first town to fall, was taken by Major General Liggett's middle westerners in less than half hour. A boche document captured there revealed that the garrison had been ordered to hold the village until the main line was withdrawn to new positions.

Control of the air enables perfect registration by the artillery. Infantry, artillery as tanks operated in liaison like clockwork. The tanks annihilated German strongholds and cleared the bushes out with their machine gun fire.

The American advance has now carried them across the narrow gauge lines forming the only connection between the two main German railways, from the north.

John W. Green, one of the patients at the Oregon state hospital who was permitted to attend the state fair yesterday did not return last night. He was committed from Lane county, and is considered harmless.

Salem Red Cross Gets Receipt From France

While of course there has been no doubt but that the surgical dressings made at the post office reached the French hospitals, yet it was quite a pleasure to the workers to receive one of their original invoices properly received by an official of a French hospital.

In shipping surgical dressings to France, each box is invoiced and marked just as in the shipment of ordinary merchandise. It has not been the custom for any surgical dressing department to correspond with hospitals in France. After being once invoiced all was left to the Red Cross for distribution in French hospitals.

Several months ago one of the boxes contained 39 packages of 9 by 9 gauze compresses, 780 pieces in all. This original invoice is now one of the records of Willamette chapter as it was returned to the chapter yesterday properly receipted by the French surgeons in charge of a certain hospital.
