Terms might have been transmitted to the German government just as drastic but even if they were accepted, Hindenburg and Ludendorff would always contend that their armies were not defeated in the field.

That is why the fighting will go on until the com-mander of the German field armies sends his envoys under a flag of truce and asks for armistice terms, which can only be the preliminary step toward surrender.

Meanwhile the great armies go right on about their business of winning the war and reducing the Central Powers to the smallest possible remnant of military power

FORGIVING OUR DEBTORS.

George W. Wickersham, former attorney general of comrade, grin and bear it. . the United States, insists that we should literally forgive to see America send a receipted bill to Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium.

"We can afford to do it," he explains, "in view of all they bore and suffered in the years before we entered the war to hold the line against the Hun and keep autocracy from crushing democracy."

There is no question of the huge moral debt we owe the nations which, while fighting for self-preservation, clark beginning to the care of the nations which, while fighting for self-preservation, clark beginning to the care of the nations which, while fighting for self-preservation, clark beginning to the care of the care of the nations which, while fighting for self-preservation, clark beginning to the care of the care have fought at the same time for free civilization everywhere, and have stood between Germany and the United States.
