FORMER PREMIER OF ITALY EXONERATED

Giolitti, Head Of Italian Government In 1914 Was Accused of Treason.

By Henry Wood,
 (United Press Staff Correspondent.)
 Rome, Nov. 25.—Former Premier Giolitti, accused of treason Saturday night by Deputy Marquis Centurione, was exonerated by a special investigating committee last night, which reported that the charges were without foundation. Giolitti, who was head of the Italian government in 1914, was generally credited with keeping Italy out of the war during the early months of the conflict. His cabinet was overthrown and a new ministry formed by Premier Salandra.

Another committee investigated the charges against Deputies Falcoi, Sciorati, De Giovanni and Chiraniolo, and Senators Panizzardi, Cefaly and Frassati, who were accused jointly with Giolitti. The committee reported that the charges were groundless and other Socialist members demanded Centurione's resignation. The investigating committee included former Ministers Bianchi and Panep and Deputies De Scalas, Turati and Bistonia.

The accusations created a tremendous uproar and socialist members tried to manhandle Centurione. A special session of parliament was held yesterday to hear the report of the committee.

EVERYTHING FROM AMBULANCE DRIVER TO NURSING AND CATERING WORK HAS BEEN INCLUDED IN THIS AMERICAN WOMAN'S FOUR YEARS OF SERVICE—She doesn't look like a war veteran, but Mrs. Arthur Gleason is one of the most experienced war workers from the United States. In 1914 she was decorated by King Albert for her services in Belgium, and is now working in the "Y" canteen. Soldiers from all over the world, many of them much older than herself, gratefully call the canteen hostess "Mother."

OREGON GUARD NOT TO BE DISBANDED

Salem To Have Two Oregon Guard And Two National Guard Organizations.

The Oregon Guard with its organizations in Salem will be maintained, according to the best information from military authorities. This is in opposition to the rumor given out a few days ago that the four companies of Oregon Guard in Salem would soon be disbanded.

So far as known, there is no intention on the part of the higher authorities to disband the Oregon Guard, and so far, no disbanding orders have been given.

It is probable however, that as soon as the second Oregon National Guard company is organized in Salem, that members of the Oregon Guard who wish to remain in their organizations, will form two companies. By this arrangement, Salem would then have two companies of Oregon National Guard and two Oregon Guard companies.

It is probable that a few men who joined the Oregon Guard from patriotic motives—especially the older men—may not enlist with either the Oregon National Guard or the re-organized Oregon Guard companies.

Having served when there existed an emergency, they do not now feel especially called on for service.

With four military companies in Salem, there will be ample opportunity for those who wish to continue training. With the assurance that the Oregon Guard will not be disbanded and also that the National Guard will soon have another company in the city, Colonel A. T. Woolpert is pushing the work of renovating the armory to make it eventually a more suitable military headquarters.

State House Notes

J. A. Churchill, superintendent of public instruction, has taken under advisement the case against Clarence Phillips, formerly Marion county school teacher and who was given a hearing before Mr. Churchill Saturday on charges of immorality. He was discharged from the Beaverton schools and the county superintendent of Washington county brought proceedings before Mr. Churchill to have his certificate to teach revoked. Phillips was not present at the hearing, being represented by Attorney George C. Brownell of Oregon City. His wife and brothers were present. The state was represented by Assistant Attorney General Benjamin. The principal witnesses against him was the girl involved in the case and Mr. Barber of Forest Grove, an agent of the department of justice.

Governor Withycombe is negotiating the sale of his residence in Corvallis to the Oregon Agricultural college, and thus is completely severing his connection with the college town, according to information reaching here. It is not known what price the governor will receive from the college for his residence. The governor is chairman of the board of regents of the college.

The city of Klamath Falls, represented by City Attorney R. C. Greenbeck, will appear amicus curiae before the supreme court in connection with the ouster suit brought by the state, on the relation of T. L. Perkins, against Dan Kellaher, who is still holding the position of city commissioner of Portland after Perkins has been elected to serve the unexpired balance of the term to which Kellaher was appointed.

Down in Klamath Falls the trouble is over the mayoralty. That city now has two mayors, as the incumbent refuses to give up his office to his successor. The Portland and Klamath Falls cases are similar, as both of them bring into question the validity of the constitutional amendment providing for the holding of all elections on the same day. City Attorney Greenbeck was given until Wednesday in which to file a brief.

A Number Of Men From Oregon And Other Western States On Boat.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Fourteen men—the hungry remnant of the crew of the sunken steamer Dumaru—have landed at San Jose, L'Orient, east coast of the Philippines, and navy department advisers this afternoon.

The story of the Dumaru and her crew is one of the most remarkable narratives of shipwrecks in recent months.

The Dumaru put out at Guam, October 16. Only a few miles off this mid-Pacific island, the vessel was struck by lightning, which igniting the gasoline, destroyed the ship. The crew put off in lifeboats. Thirty eight days they drifted in the open boats, ten days without food and five days without water.

Sixteen of the crew died from exposure and two others drowned while landing at San Jose 1200 miles from their starting point.

Two other lifeboats were rescued some time ago. This last group accounts for all of the crew.
