Swan and Anderson of Champoogery camp, and 6 when we returned. One man was dead and one mortally wounded. It was a terrible night, but notwithstanding I held mass in the woods as per schedule at 10 that morning. Right in the woods where we were shelled, the carpenter built an altar, and I said mass to the most attentive and devoted congregation for which I have ever conducted services. When mass was over we had burial services in the little cemetery close by and left those gone to rest in the little sheltered corner where children of France lie sleeping."

straighten out the mess which had been caused by Witherscombe's mismanagement. In the matter Minto lost his official scalp and Murphy was appointed.

During the greater part of Murphy's time the prison has been under the exclusive management of the governor, with the other members of the board having no authority to interfere. They may have been derelict in their duty in not assuming active management of the prison when the law placed it in their hands, but whatever view might be taken of that feature of the fact remains that the governor was recognized as the head of the prison practically at all times.

Those who have given some thought to the situation declare that if the management of the prison is again returned to the board of control, an amendment to the constitution should be submitted giving the board also the power to grant paroles and pardons, instead of the governor. If a board of three men has this power there will be less likelihood of it being used for political purposes or being tainted with scandal, it is argued. If this power is given to the board of control, then that board will have no justification for not assuming full management of the prison, as it does now over all the other state institutions.

FATHER MORAN

last town up this way we met a group of French civilians who had been held prisoners for four years. Their faces were care-worn and wrinkled, and the fire had gone out of their eyes. When they smiled, they smiled only with their lips—they had been four years in a literal hell.

"To make a long story short, however, we did up the drive and kept the Germans running towards Germany faster than they ever ran in their lives before. Oh, it is great, and this view makes up for long waiting and sacrifice and hardship. The French now realize the wonderful fighting qualities of the American soldier, and the Germans feel it.

"I am living beside a wood. There are thousands of men and horses scattered here and there, all around me, and always a roar, as of nearby thunder, in my ears. From above come the detestible aerial bombs. Last night one dropped 100 feet of my tent and made a hole five feet deep and six feet across but I was so tired I didn't even wake up! I have seen many battles in the air. Our longrange guns roar all night long, and every shot means destruction to the enemy lines.

"Gets Tobacco for the Boys.

"The other night was a bright evening for the boys here. I had the good fortune to receive a consignment of goods from the Knights of Columbus. It consisted of cigarettes, chewing tobacco, smoking tobacco, writing paper, envelopes, pencils and good old American chocolate. I lined the boys up and played the role of Santa Claus, and you may be sure they expressed their gratitude for the luxuries. Within the next few days I am going again to the nearest K. C. headquarters—I'll get there somehow—and will try to get some more stuff so the boys all over the brigade may share in the treat.

"I am living the life of a soldier, eating their food, sleeping in their beds and trying to be all things to all men. There are hardships to bear, of course, but I have learned to forget all about them and look forward to the happy moment when our boys will proudly march into Berlin. I want to be right there at the finish.

"For the past two nights I have been busy dodging shells, and getting back to the old practice of sliding the bases. Early Sunday morning I was sleeping in my little tent when a shell dropped five yards away. There must have been many fervent prayers said for me that night, for the shell did not explode. It was what we call a "dud"—a shell with a defective fuse.

Conducts Mass as Planned.

"Being under shell fire is the most terrible ordeal any man can ever go through. The shell comes whistling through the air with the most menacing and blood-curdling music that ear can hear and then, heaven help you if it bursts near you. The men fall on their faces, because when the shell bursts the fragments have less chance of getting you. I think we fell flat 40 times that night while seeking shelter. It was 3 o'clock when we left the bat-
