G AISTY in capital letters spelled the keynote of Thankagiving eve, as interpreted by the members of the Milhee club and their guests in terms of music, laughter and dancing at the Country club Wednesday night. There have been parties of note in past seasons at the Illihee Country club, and there will be scores of glordon parties to come in the calendar.

There have been parties of note in past seasons at the Illihec Country club, and there will be stores of glorious parties to come in the calendar of club functions, out none may boast of a more joyous camarndoric than this year's Thankagiving dance which as brightly scaled the close of the gray days of the war and innagurated so aspisiously the dawn of a new and gindsome eta of social activity.

An added impetus and lift was given to the dancing by the inspiriting swing of the Hunt orchestra, which has so frequently in times past been a much desired and contributing factor in the gala good times at the Country club.

A number of stunning gowns were in colorful evidence, all the more remarked after the long war period of informal dress, which for many months has been good form only even at the large functions held from time to time.

A delightful feature of the party was the gapper served in the grill room of the club. The dancers circled small individual tables, decked apropos of the season with exquisite little centerpieces of tiny golden pompon chrystanthemums. The menu cards were an artistic triumph of pen and ink, with dever thumb nail skeetches.

The rustic dancing hall vied with its hilltop envirous crowned with fall foliage, in the woodland decking of scarlet touched autumn leaves, interwoven with sprays of mistletoe. The chandeliers sinded with defty arranged clusters of brilliant tenfage gave forth a soft glow. The punch tables beckened with the subdued light of gleaming candles in their antique brass fieks.

Wednesday night were ushered in for a group of society folk, with a merry dinner party held at the Marion hotel preceding the party at the club house. Distinctive decoration was noted in the table adornments. Two small round ta-bles, arranged at either end of a large one were centered with artistic gold baskets of fruit, further elaborated with trailing key. The larger table also revealed suggestions of Thanksgiving in the quaint brass candlesticks,

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Livesley were among the society people out of Portland privileged to attend the notable dinner dance given at the Waverly club in Portland Thanksgiving eve, when a carnival of rejoicing over the recent victory reigned supreme during the evening. They were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Prank E. Smith, former Salem residents, for the dance. A galaxy of gorgeous gowns, marked a strong contrast to the simple dancing frocks of the recent war time functions.

The gayeties at the Country club wednesday night were ushered in for a group of society folk, with a merry urable dances ever given by the club.

A combined Thanksgiving and patriotic motif was worked out in the decorations, which were unusually effective. About 25 large tags were draped in such a manner as to present red, white and blue pendulums of fluttering color. Patriotic festcons were also stretched from the chandefers to the corners of the hall, fielden miniature pumpkins and a variety of patriotic insignia were jauntily suspended from the side lights. The walls were festive-ly adorned with pictured turkeys and decorative Januers emblazoned with
