suggests a feminine Paderewski of the old days, she is eminently attractive and prettily petite and a thoroughly developed artist beside.

The New York Globe says:

"The musical gifts of Winifred Byrd are all out of proportion to her diminutive person. Not only her name but her appearance is suggestive of some illustrious wood creature. It is with a feeling almost of apprehension that one watches this dainty being scat herself before the open maw of the grand piano, a sensation which changes to bewilderment when she grapples surly and fearlessly with some formidable composition calculated to test the nerve of the most virile male performer. She has inherited a good deal of that brilliant, breath taking manner of her teacher, Teresa Carreno, in bravura passages, and her touch also has the warm, magnetic quality which used to capture us in that great artist."

The three Copin numbers given last evening at Aeolian hall were well chosen to display her endowments. They were the fantasia, op. 49, and two etudes, Nos. 8 and 11 of op. 25, played with quite unusual poetic insight and loveliness of tone. The "Winter Wind" was especially delightful for its phrasing, clarity and charming rhythmic sweep, and one would be expecting indeed to desire a more bewitching interpretation."

Summarized briefly the New York Journal of Commerce said:

"Winifred Byrd was heard in her second piano recital in Aeolian hall Monday evening. Her audience was of a size whose numbers indicated the gratifying and increasing appreciation of a musician who presents herself to the public as an interpreter in the best sense, whose work is devoid of the sensational and whose attitude is essentially directed to artistic achievement."

And in the Musical American of November 16 is a short and laudatory sketch of the artistic achievements of our Oregon pianist, in part as follows:

"At her New York debut last season that portion of the musically inclined public which drifts about from recital to recital roused itself from its usual lethargy long enough to dub Winifred Byrd a pupil in every sense worthy of her teacher, the great Carreno, at her recital of Monday evening, Nov. 4, even the drifters must have become impressed with the fact that though she has not yet attained so full a maturity as time may have in store for her, Miss Byrd is already in her own right, a serious artist who has something to say and a considerable technique with which to say it. Above all, she seems to attack a composition with a regard for the composer's intent and, at the same time, with strong personal tastes and that power to shape an interpretation into an intellectually organic whole which gives an artistic personal dignity, besides some poignant attraction."

"Miss Byrd's playing of the 'Winter Wind' etude of Chopin, was especially interesting. The forte she employed was not simply a carnival of noise; it had depth, color, tonal beauty. Perhaps such a rich forte is heaven's reward to players who, like Miss Byrd and make a majority of the young pianists now before the public, speak most in mezzoforte and are not afraid that weighty words will lose by being whispered."

The members of the Welsh society of Salem were the sponsors of a social evening of distinctive enjoyment, and one which was pervaded by a marked atmosphere of genial good fellowship, when they were entertained Tuesday night by Professor and Mrs. T. S. Roberts, at their home, 270 South Fourteenth street.

Professor Roberts had assembled the society for the evening with the purpose of surprising them with some new selections of Welsh songs, which had just received from the east, with the intention of trying their musical merits later in the evening. As events culminated it proved to be Professor Roberts, who was surprised when the members of the Welsh society presented Mrs. Roberts and him with a handsome William and Mary oak rocking chair as a wedding gift and token of appreciation of the regard in which both Professor Roberts and his bride are held by their friends. Their wedding was an event of the summer, and the tribute of remembrance had been planned for an occasion of the early fall, but owing to the ban on social activities along with scores of other gatherings was delayed.

Professor Roberts expressed his gratitude very graciously when he responded generously to many requests for piano numbers during the remainder of the evening.

Afterwards refreshments were served by Mrs. Jane Roberts, Mrs. T. S. Roberts and Mrs. A. L. Johnson. An appropriate and delectable feature being a Welsh bread made by Mrs. Jane Roberts, the mother of the host.

Those present on the occasion were: Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Jones, Sam Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Jarman, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Humphrey, and children, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Davies, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. George, Mrs. Jane Roberts, Mrs. Malcolm Ramp, Mrs. Mary Myers, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Lloyd, Mrs. N. P. Gilman, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rosman, Mr. and Mrs. Sol Roberts, Mrs. A. L. Johnson, Mrs. M. L. Harding.

The Beethoven club, composing a group of the piano and violin pupils of Miss Joy Turner, held its initial meeting of the year last Sunday afternoon at Miss Turner's studio, 335 North Capitol street. Following the program various musical topics were discussed, and to hit somebody, just catalog him correctly and let him rave. I have been up at the front where business was good and have undergone numerous kinds of "big stuff." The one thought that flashed through my mind the first time Fritz turned loose a "Whizz Bang" right over my head was—"How did he know I was here," and then a quick feeling of relief that it didn't hit me.

"I have seen men crouch under a veritable twig or small bush at the screech of a shell and others stand rigid and others pay no attention at all, merely glancing to see where it hit."

"C'est la Guerre," as the French say. If you're hit, you're hit, and if not, you're not, and that is all there is to it.

"I have seen many prisoners of late young and old but the young predominate. They all seemed relieved at being captured. Many amusing stories are told of captured Germans, such as one for instance as where in front of one American sector a whole Boche company came out of its trench with packs rolled and all their belongings to surrender gracefully to a couple of lone doughboys who were lost.

Dance Or Not To Dance Up To S. A. T. C. Boys

To dance or not to dance. That is the question troubling a number of the Students Army Training Corps boys of Willamette University just at present.

Announcement has been made that under the auspices of the National League of Mothers, a dance would be given for the S. A. T. C. boys on the evening of Saturday, Dec. 7. The mothers will be in charge and it is to be given at the Masonic Temple.

Of course the University does not approve of such a thing as dancing and once before when the subject was under discussion, Dr. Doney set forth plainly that Willamette did not approve of this form of amusement.

However, it is understood that many of the boys are not opposed to tripping it occasionally, especially since being inducted into the service, they have had to go to bed every night at 10 o'clock, excepting Saturday nights.

But if they have any doubts as to how the University stands and also the view point of the Student Body, they were set straight yesterday afternoon when resolutions were passed by the student body of the University as follows, the resolutions following the receipt of the invitation issued to the boys to come to the dance Dec. 7:

"Be it resolved: That the associate student body of Willamette University is opposed to the holding of any entertainment for or in honor of Willamette University students when such entertainments shall occur on the same dates as any student activities of the University, which latter are nominally to be attended by a considerable portion of the student body.

"Be it further resolved: That this student body looks with disfavor upon the attendance at such entertainments of any students who are nominally a party to the student activity in question."

If the S. A. T. C. boy attends the dance, he gets in bad with the student body of the University. If he declines to accept the invitation to the dance given in his honor, he gets in dates as any student activities of the National League of Mothers, that has done so much for his welfare while in the city. It is understood that thirty-five of the ninety S. A. T. C. boys short sketches of different composers were given. Later simple refreshments were served.

STATE HOUSE NEWS

Governor Withycombe has appointed J. D. Farrell of Portland as a member of the state fair board to succeed Mrs. Edyth Tozier Weathered, also of Portland. Mrs. Weathered's term expired in March, when there was much speculation as to whether she would be re-appointed as she had not "played the game" to the governor's liking, it was said. It was then predicted that she would be displaced as soon as the election was over, and this prediction is now carried out.

Court House News

In the case of David Rowland against B. E. Otjen et al before Judge George G. Bingham, the court decreed that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the $200 asked for and $50 attorney's fees. In his complaint, Mr. Rowland alleged that he had piled and cut 130 cords of fir wood for Mr. Otjen and that the price was $250.00 and that $200.00 of the amount was due and unpaid. The court also ordered that if in the sale of the judgment against the wood it did not sell for enough to cover the judgment, that a deficiency judgment should be entered against B. E. Otjen.

In the case of P. W. Kelly et al against the Mercantile Insurance Co., the suit was dismissed with neither party to recover costs. In the stipulation filed, the defendant was to pay the plaintiff $839.19 and the cost of abstract and also the unpaid taxes and the plaintiff was to deed to Homer H. Smith lots 9 and 10 of Block 26, Englewood addition.

J. C. Sigmond, Max Gehlar and Hazelle Gearhart were appointed appraisers of the estate of Orallie Courville.

Marion county will fall down on its quota of War Savings Stamps, unless some special effort is made to interest the people in the purchase, County School Superintendent Smith said this morning. During the two weeks between Nov. 9 and Nov. 23, there was purchased in Marion county stamps to the value of only $22,000. There still is $158,315 of the county's quota to be purchased before the close of the year.

Mr. Smith is sending letters to all schools urging that pupils keep their pledges to buy stamps. No special drive will be put on but it is hoped that with the coming of Christmas, more interest will be taken in order that

BREWERS WILL CLOSE

New York, Nov. 30.—Brewing plants in New York representing an investment of $200,000,000, will close at midnight in compliance with the law enacted by congress. The general public however will not be without its beer. The brewers have produced enough beer to last at least two and possibly three months.

State House Notes

During the past week 430 accidents of which one was fatal, were reported to the state industrial accident commission. The victim of the fatal accident was John Olson, who was killed in Portland while engaged in building operations.

Of the total number reported, 406 were subject to the provisions of the compensation act, 18 were from firms and corporations which have rejected the provisions of the compensation act and 6 were from public utility corporations not subject to the provisions of the compensation act.

Influenza was the cause of another death at the state penitentiary last night, making the eleventh death to occur since the epidemic struck that institution. The victim was Leo Stoddard, alias Jack Williams. He was serving a sentence of 10 years to life for committing highway robbery while armed with a dangerous weapon in Union county.
