Finance Chairman Says Expenses Will Be Pruned

Washington, Dec. 6.—Declaring that the November expenditures of the government set a new record, Senator Borah today asked Democratic Leader Martin what has become of the retrenchment policy which Martin recently announced was to become effective at once. The first month of his economy program shows expenditures of $1,935,249,000, said Borah.

"This sets a new record for one month's expenditures," Martin replied that he had been assured by Secretary Baker and others that immediate reduction in spending would be made.

"If war expenditures go on in peace times, the country will soon go up in bankruptcy," said Martin. "I can assure the senate that when requests for appropriations come here they will be pruned down."

The purchase by the war department of a rifle range in North Carolina and continuation of work on a training camp at Columbus, Ga., were cited by senators to prove that the war department is continuing to spend appropriations made for war purposes only.

The rifle range, Senator Curtis declared, was bought at a cost of $5,000,000 after congress had refused to grant an appropriation of $1,500,000 for the purchase.

Borah asked administration senators to tell how long a large force of American soldiers are to be in France at the expense of the nation.

"We are told a million or more are to stay there indefinitely," said Borah. "I'd like to know how long indefinitely is."

Senator Martin pointed out that the draft law limits the service of drafted men, so that they must be brought home promptly after the signing of the peace treaty.

DEATH OF MRS CHRISTIE

The funeral services of Mrs. John Christie, who died at her home in this city November 29, were held at the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the sermon being preached by Rev. O. L. Dark. Music was by a quartette consisting of Mrs. Benton Killin, Mrs. C. L. Dark, E. P. Moreau and C. E. Tyler. Interment was at Belle Passi. Rev. Mr. Tuttle read the following obituary:

Harriet A. Tuttle (Christie) was born at Fondulac, Auburn county, Wisconsin, August 1, 1861, and died at her home in Woodburn, Oregon, Nov. 29, 1918, aged 57 years, 3 months and 29 days. On November 7, 1886, she was married to John Christie, who survives her. To this union were born five children, three of whom survive their mother: Mrs. Cecil J. Brown of Powers, Oregon; Private Gerald B. Christie of Camp Meade, Maryland; Vera, Christie of Woodburn, and one grandchild, Ray Brown. She is survived also by four sisters and one brother, Clinton J. Tuttle who is in the service of his country "somewhere" in France.

Mrs. Christie and family lived in Christie, Wisconsin, until 1904, when they came to Woodburn, Oregon where she has since made her home.—Woodburn Independent.

The football game last Saturday between the Garfield and Englewood football teams followed out the ethics of the game to some extent in both claiming the other side was badly whipped and the usual wrangling at the close of the game. Saturday there came in the report that the score stood Garfield 18, Englewood 6. But now comes the Englewood boys and say the correct score should be made public that when the playing stopped it stood Englewood 30, Garfield 6.

AMERICAN SOLDIERS

battalion will declare martial law in Coblenz and guard public utilities. The main force has reached the line of Ruppenthal, Boos, Couernich, Mayen Greimersburg, Simmern and Kellenbach.

In view of the revolutionary conditions, the Americans plan to deal with whatever party is in power. In only three towns have they found a workmen's and soldiers' council as the de facto government. They dealt with them the same as they have with the burgomasters. At Treves the burgomaster was working in harmony with the workmen's and soldiers' council.

The occupation of German territory thus far has been remarkably pacific. Although facilities have been given for complaints to the commands of both armies, not a single complaint or arrest was made either by the Americans or Germans. The Americans are holding hundreds of square miles of enemy territory and ruling hundreds of thousands of enemy people, yet there has not been a single overt act of hostility by a person of responsible age reported.

Is Remarkable Record. Military officials experienced in occupation of enemy countries consider this a remarkable record. They are puzzled to account for the lack of bitterness, considering that the Germans frankly admit they believe America's intervention snatched victory away from them. Several reasons are assigned. One is that the people are so weary they are glad the war is over, even if it means defeat. Another is that the people are so accustomed to military discipline that they submit tamely to any form of it. Still another is that the people have not yet had time to grasp the lightning-like change of events, or are submitting through fear of the consequences of an outbreak.

Some officials hold the theory that the Germans are playing a shrewd propaganda game, thus trying to gain the sympathy of the Americans, which they would turn to their account after peace is signed. The latter is not regarded as likely, however, as the majority of the people make no attempt to fraternize and do not conceal that they are not glad about the Americans' presence.

American Policy. On the other hand, the Americans' rule so far has been extremely mild. With the exception of the requisition of public buildings, some coal and forage, part use of the railways and telephones and the billeting of officers with civilian families, it has not affected the private life of the Germans in the slightest degree.

The policy of the Americans in charge of civil affairs has been to impose restrictions only as it is shown they are needed, but they are prepared to impose, and enforce, the most stringent and drastic laws if necessary. When the army completes its marches and takes the positions designated in the armistice, it is probable that a number of restrictions will be promulgated which are now held in abeyance because of difficulty of enforcement while the army is on the move.

The occupation of Treves and other large towns in the Rhineland is presenting strange situations for both Americans and Germans. The Americans are unable to get accustomed to seeing gray-clad men—the sight of whom only a few weeks ago meant to kill or be killed—walking about or standing on the street corners, or plowing fields beside the roads.

Sometimes groups of German soldiers are encountered marching homeward alongside the American columns. They keep to their own side of the road, however.

Guard Bridges. Military police are guarding bridges and railways and patrolling the streets of the occupied cities and villages. The hotel lobbies, restaurants and movies are thronged with American officers. The people never seem to get accustomed to the sight of the khaki-clad columns flowing through their villages day after day. They appear to retain the bewilderment caused by the quick turn of events. Only a few months ago the reserve troops marched westward through these same villages to the front, then far away.

Adults stare, but covertly, at the doughboys as the latter go quietly about their business. Only the children are unable to conceal their sentiments, which mostly are some form of curiosity. They follow each column that marches by, some clinging to the hands of good natured doughboys, despite the admonitions of their elders.
