AIR OF PEACE STIRS FRENCH CAPITAL CITY

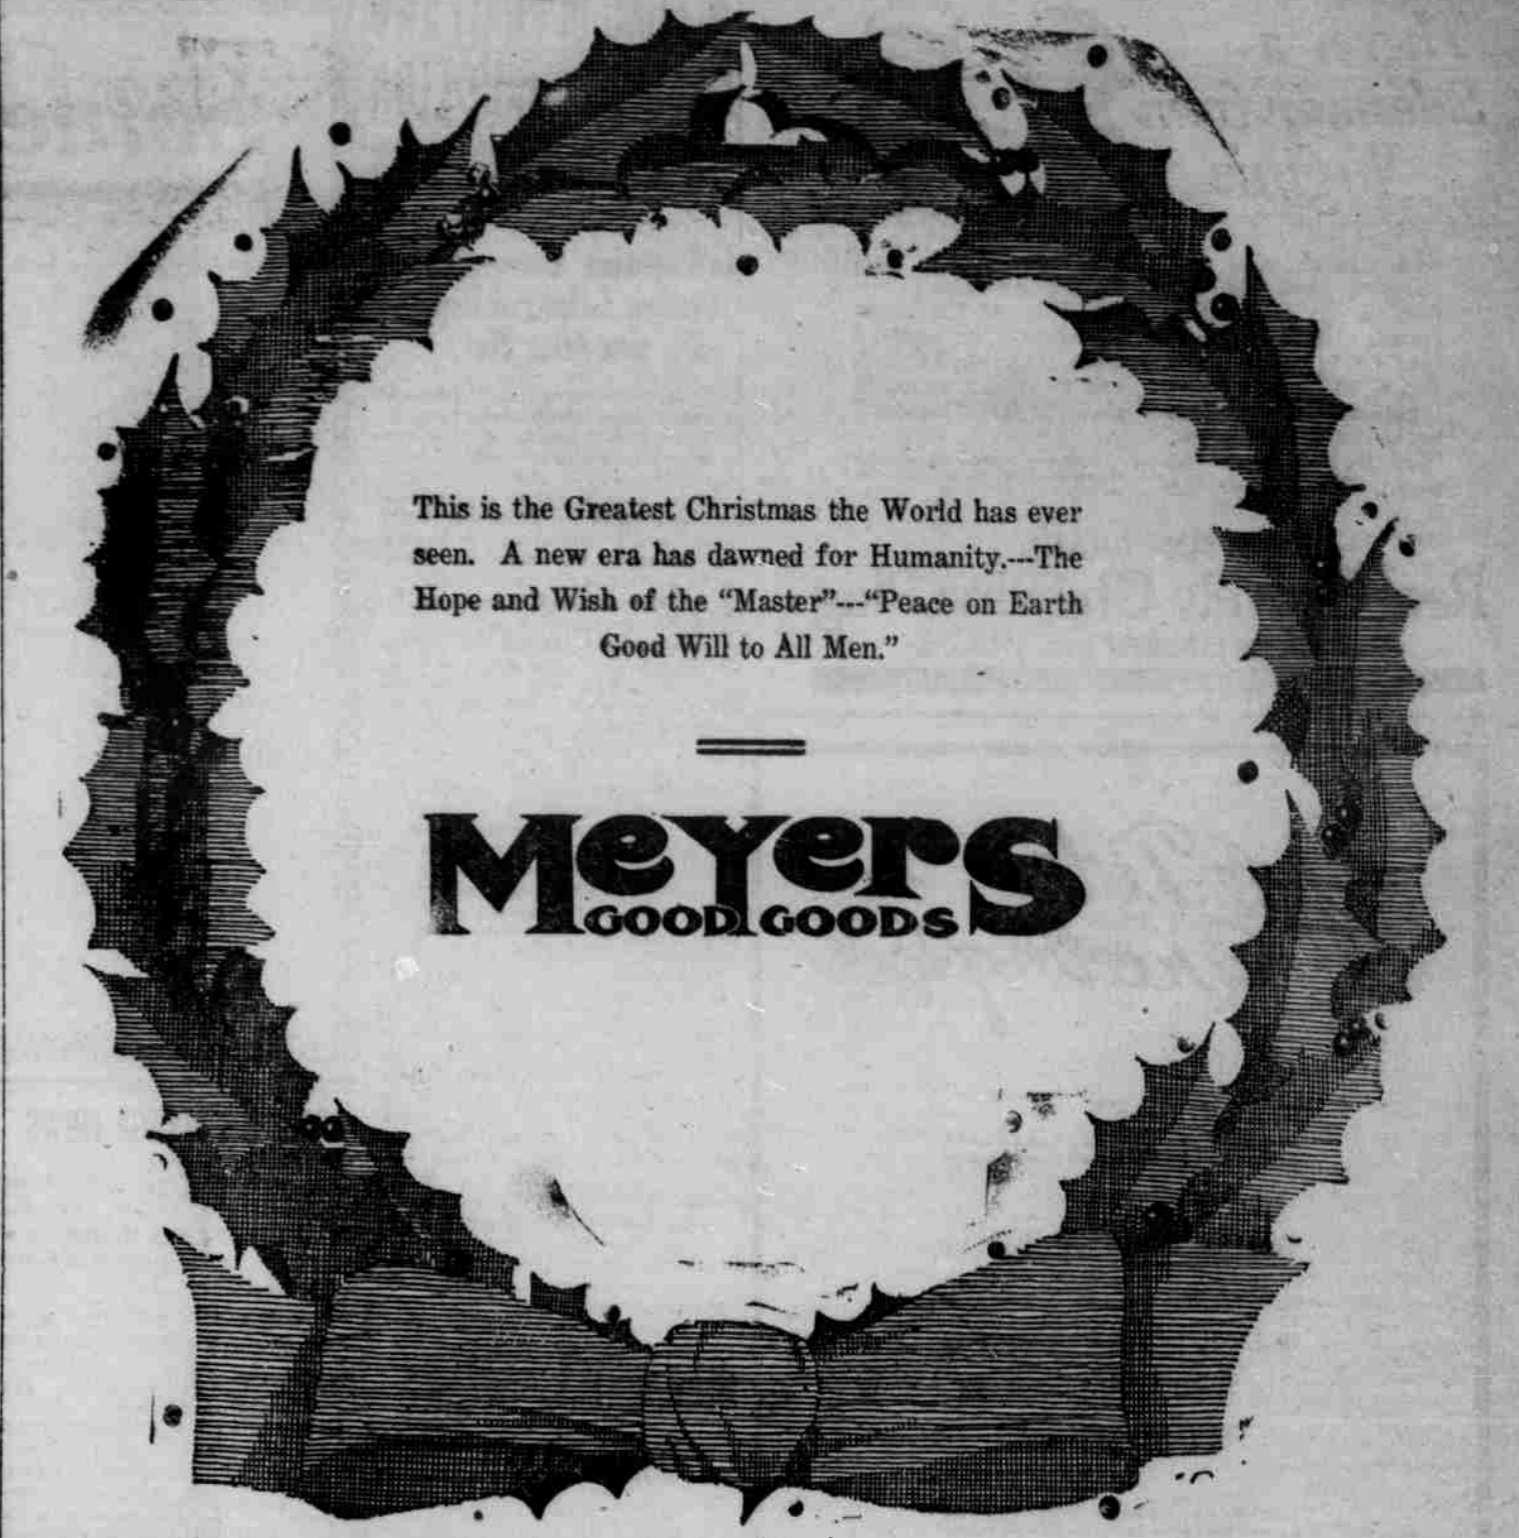

Transformation Of Paris Between June And December Beyond Belief.

By Fred S. Ferguson
 (United Press staff correspondent)
 Paris, Dec. 2.—(By mail.)—Paris is coming back to life. There is peace in the air.

The transformation of Paris between June and December is almost beyond belief. In June the boche was on the Marne. A thin line of Americans stopped the enemy at Chateau Thierry. The boulevards of Paris were all deserted. Shops were empty, cafe and restaurants without patrons. Soldiers and war workers were the only people to be seen on the streets. Night was a time of terror. As the moon rose the sirens shrieked their terrifying wails of the approach of the Goths. By day the shells from the big Bertha landed with deadly regularity every 15 minutes. There were whispered rumors of what had been hit. The communique was eagerly scanned daily and as the Americans and French held the anxious civilian braving to remain asked 'can they continue to hold or is Paris to fall.'

Success Continued
 They held. The July counter offensive despite confidence in the ultimate result remained. Success continued. Civilians began to return. More and more Americans arrived, October came and with it the beginning of the end. By this time Paris was winking at the moon. There had not been an air raid in weeks. The boche was too busy at other games. Automobiles began to be more daring with their lights. Instead of groping down the dark boulevards and streets they winked their big head lights occasionally for reassurance. Restaurants began to fill up. The theaters were crowded. People thronged the boulevards. There was a conviction that the war was nearing the end.

City Alive With Banners
 It was such a Paris that the representatives of the allies found when they met to discuss Germany's appeal for an armistice. The city was alive with rumors. You could stir up any sort of a rumor desired. Just go anywhere people were congregating and listening. But France didn't want a premature peace. The people felt the boche was whipped and were eager to keep on until the job was finished. Sentiment toward President Wilson was hot, then cold. People were afraid he was going to talk to the boche too much. They felt that all of the fight having been taken out of the Germans they were playing a deliberate game of trying to talk for time.

But President Wilson passed the armistice affair over to Marshal Foch. Generals, prime ministers, admirals, ambassadors poured in. The conference at historic Versailles was opened. The eyes of the world were again on Paris, but with different thoughts and different feeling than in June.

The biggest Christmas business ever known in Salem. Such is the unanimous opinion of Salem merchants. The general opinion is that the holiday business was fully one-third larger than that of a year ago. The Christmas spirit was in the air even early in the month. In fact from the time of the second great peace celebration, conditions began to change. Merchants say the buying began freely as soon as it was definitely known that the war was over. With the assurance that the boys were not only coming home but were already on the way, the spirit of giving seemed to take hold of the town people. Never has the postoffice had such a rush of mailing packages as was seen for the past few days. Women especially coming in with dozens of packages. The buying was not confined to any special class of stores. In every place where there was anything that could be sold for a present, there has been crowds of eager buyers for the past two weeks. And the spirit of wishing to especially celebrate this Christmas was in evidence even at the meat markets and grocery stores.

were in five big offensives and the company came out of the big fights without a single casualty. The 65th was cited for bravery by General Pershing and the boys are all wearing the one stripe service of six months in France.

For taking such an active part in the St. Mihiel drive and the hard fighting in the Argonne forests, the 65th—and this means the Albany boys—were among the first to be returned home. It is thought they will soon be on their way west from New York city.

Former New York Girl Decorated By King George

London, Dec. 10.—(By mail.)—Viscountess Harcourt, formerly Miss Mary Burns, New York, was decorated by the king recently with the Grand Cross of the British Empire for distinguished service in the American and British Red Cross. Viscountess Harcourt was in charge of two American hospitals, American Red Cross hospital 21 at Paigton, Devonshire and number 22 at Lancaster Gate.

New 1918 Model Messin Holds More Than Ever

Paris, Dec. 17.—(By mail.)—A new 1918 model of messin was issued just prior to the end of the fighting. It created more interest along the lines of the American expeditionary forces than the news that Germany had asked for an armistice. Despite possible objections from Mr. Hoover, the new messin holds more than ever.

English Conductorettes Willing To Give Up Jobs

London, Dec. 10.—(By mail.)—"Oh, if the men would only hurry up and come back and take back their jobs! we're fed up to the ears with this stuff!" After having been jolted about, but fated about, through fog, sleet and snow for four years on an autobus, this was what one conductorette replied today when asked if she would be willing to give up her job when the men came back from the war. Many others answered in the same tone.

Miniature Belgian Town Being Built In France

Havre, France, Dec. 18.—(By Mail.)—A miniature Belgian town is being built on the hillside on the outskirts of this town for the purpose of caring for Belgian refugees. Model 4 room cottages are being erected by the American Red Cross, and when the town is completed it will resemble a bit of Belgium transplanted to France. It will have paved streets, electric lights and an up to date water and sewage system. The population will be selected from the most needy refugees in France.

Artillery Company From Albany Coming Home Soon

Dr. Mark Skiff is in receipt of word that his son who was with the 65th in the artillery service had arrived in New York Sunday on the Mallory and would soon start for the west. He enlisted with Captain Knox's artillery at Albany. After several months of drilling at Fort Stevens, the Albany company was sent through the Panama canal and direct to France, where it went into action after a brief period of training, especially in gun practice. The company to which Dr. Skiff's son was attached—and this was the Albany boys under Captain Knox—
